A GREAT AMERICAN

A short time ago the King of Italy, the members of his ministry, the American ambassador and many other notables, gathered in Rome and unveiled a marble bust of a plain American citizen, David Lubin. Thirty years or so ago David Lubin was a small shopkeeper in Sacramento, California. Lubin saw the need of accurate information concerning markets and crop conditions to help gardeners, orchardists and farmers; guide for market opportunities, knowledge upon which to base amount, character, variety of what was to be raised. He conceived a plan for a great information bureau.

The idea grew slowly at first, but presently it became an institution in California. Then the rest of the country saw it big, and Lubin's crop information bureau became nationwide. Later Lubin started in to make it world wide.

Lubin died recently in Rome, head of a world wide organization such as he had dreamed of. Every civilized nation in the world contributed to the information he gathered and distributed and supported his enterprise with funds willingly given to the organizer and director of the International Institute of Agriculture. But nation wide information concerning markets and crops is not the end of it all. It was merely a great start. Lubin planned also for correct and scientific distribution of the foods grown on this earth and slowly that will follow. Some day, grateful producers and grateful consumers will place Lubin's name on the pinnacle with the greatest who have lived.

FUTURE HAY MARKET APPEARS STRONG

All reports from the Idaho territory where hay is a major crop show that the present season will produce a much shorter hay crop than normal.

Senator R. N. Stanfield is understood to have wired to his partners in the Echo district that all the hay grown upon his land on Butter Creek will be required for this winter's feeding. Last year none of this hay was fed to the Stanfield sheep.

W. J. Logan of Umatilla returned last week from a length visit to his old home near Payette, Idaho and reports that sheep men are now paying from $10 to $12.50 per ton for hay in the stack. A large acreage which has been growing hay in past years has this season been plowed up and planted to potatoes and small grains because of the low prices of last year and also because of the ravages of the weevil which has wrought great havoc in Idaho and in Malheur county. Some of this land is being planted to Red Clover as the weevil does not seem to attack this plant.

O. T. Ferguson, a prominent Heppner farmer returned Wednesday from a two weeks trip into British Columbia and reports that this season will find the stockmen facing the shortest stack yards in several years. This shortage is expected to be made up by shipments from the Yakima valley. This will relieve what might otherwise be surplus in this district.

The hay crop in the foothill sections of eastern Oregon, due to the late spring and long dry season will be much shorter than usual and as far south as Grant county, stockmen are even now rustling feed. Last season no feeder would buy until late in the year and he paid his own price. They are now offering $10.00 in the stack and there is good prospect that the greater portion of the feeder hay will go at around this figure.

Western Oregon, which last year shipped to the dairy sections of the coast about 1500 cars will this season have practically none for shipping to these districts. Western Washington is in much the same boat. Dairy men from all over western Oregon and Washington are actively trying to contract for future delivery while at this time last season they would not talk purchase at any price.

Many sales are reported from the Hermiston and Touchet districts at $14.00 or better on the ear at loading point and the prospects are that the season price will average above this figure. The fly in the ointment is the fact that the men who must feed this year's crop have not yet recovered from the period of depression and it is hoped that hay prices will stay within reasonable bounds.

STUPENDOUS PAGEANT "THE WAYFARER" AT SEATTLE

"The Wayfarer," a stupendous American Passion Pageant, in which 3000 actors and 2000 trained singers will take part upon the world's largest stage, will be presented in the Stadium of the University of Washington at Seattle July 24 to 29.

The performance will be held under the auspices of the Associated Students of the University of Washington. The scenery, costumes and lighting effects to be used in the drama cost $250,000.

Special reduced rates on all railroads for the round trip.

The play deals with the epochal periods of the world's history, starting in the Babylonian times and features the coming of the Messiah, the triumphant entry into Jerusalem and the Crucifixion. Five thousand persons take part in the scene depicting the Golden Age, when all nations, creeds and races gather around a gigantic illuminated cross.

During the "Wayfarer week", Seattle will provide special entertainment for visitors including yacht races, outings, golf and tennis tournaments, baseball and mountain trips.

AS TEDDY JR SEES IT

Editor's Note: The recent triumph of progressive Republican candidates in various states and upset of other Old Guard leaders brought forth the following comment from Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Assistant Secretary of the Navy, when approached by the Washington representative of this newspaper:

I AM delighted with Gifford Pinchot's victory in Pennsylvania.

It indicates a general trend toward progressive ideals. In this connection, however, it is necessary to bear in mind that since 1912 lines are blurred considerably on progressive policies.

For example, a very large part of the 1912 progressive platform has already become the law of the land. In this, woman suffrage is a specific incident.
