THE PANAMA CANAL AND THE PACIFIC COAST

(By Senator R. N. Beaufield)

The last issue of the Panama Canal Record, August 27, 1922, contains such information of vital interest to the people of Oregon. It says, in part:

"During the past fiscal year, July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922, more than one-half of the net bonded cargo moved through the Canal originated in the west coast of the United States, as compared with approximately one-third for the preceding year."

A statement also printed in this number of the Record shows a total of 15,815 ships passing through the Canal during the first nine years of its operation, 1915-1922.

The cargo tonnage carried by these ships was 41,148,094 tons and the tolls paid were $54,021,849.97.

For the fiscal years of 1921 and 1922 the number of ships passing through the Canal was 3,428, the cargo carried was 11,484,174 cargo tons and the tolls paid were $12,476,752.32. This shows a very large increase for the last two years of the eight years the Canal has been in operation. In this connection it is well for the people in the coast states to note the rapid increase in tonnage passing through the Canal. With over half of the merchantable sea tonnage in the United States standing in the three states of California, Oregon and Washington, with half of the population of the United States living in the eastern states where they can efficiently be reached by water transportation, with large fleets of ships created for war purposes now available for transportation of our products, with the Atlantic harbors and ports developed and the Panama Canal completed and in operation, we lack but one thing to bring the timber products, fruit, wheat flour and wool of the Pacific Coast to the consumers of the east at a much reduced cost of transportation, and that is the improvement of our Pacific coast harbors. It is time for the Port districts of the Pacific coast to unite in asking congress for their needs to make this chain of water transportation complete, and being material to both the people of the east and the people of the west.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST POTATO SHOW AT SPOKANE NOV. 21-24

The Pacific Northwest Potato Show is for the purpose of encouraging the development of an industry that will keep these millions of dollars at home, make profitable the development of thousands of acres of land now idle or only partly productive, and thus furnish to the commercial potato growers of our large irrigated districts a seed grown under conditions that will assure the maximum production, backed by a certification that guarantees quality.

The Pacific Northwest is sending millions of dollars east every year for seed potatoes while parts of our own country have the soil, altitude, and climatic conditions necessary for the production of the best seed in the world. Another important function of the show will be to assist in bringing together the buyer and the grower of seed potatoes for their mutual benefit. The grower of high commercial grade will find the show a valuable medium through which to educate the consumer in the difference between good healthy potatoes and the common run of inferior quality, poor keeping and often diseased spuds. The potato grower's conference will be held in connection with the show.

The Oregon Health exposition which will be staged in the Public Auditorium in Portland from October 26 to November 4, will be of interest to every man, woman and child in the state of Oregon. All that goes to promote the health, welfare and happiness of the nation will be exhibited. Two hours spent in examining the wonderful displays will provide a liberal education in what is being done for individual and community health, and how the individual, by simple means readily at hand, may improve the health and comfort of himself and family. The exhibits will be so graphic that the child will quickly grasp the fundamentals of health education as well as the principles of sanitation, safety and recreation. The exposition is being staged under the joint auspices of the state board of health and the city health bureau of Portland. A large attendance to the exposition is expected from the state at a whole, for this will be the first time that this exposition has been held in the west.

Jungle Man Comes Wearing Gloves.

This is a new and most recent picture of Banting Siki, the Tunis Algeria jungle man who knocked out the European champion, Georges Carpentier, in six rounds at Paris, and is now coming to the U. S. He wants to fight Dempsey, but will be forced to show his class against some lesser light, maybe Harry Goph or Kid Norfolk.

FALSE HOPE

Sin on every side is growing bolder, and the very delusion contained in the statement, "The world is growing better," is of satanic origin, and is for the purpose of putting to sleep the forces of righteousness.

Human nature is incapable of moral improvement by any human process known to mankind. The only thing within the power of God that can change human nature is regeneration. Regeneration cannot affect its character. Regeneration must precede reformation. Those who have been regenerated are of course growing better; they are improving; they are progressing; they are growing more Godlike.

The good are getting better, but the bad are getting worse. The unregenerated, the unwashed, the unwarmed are more skilled, subtle, and powerful in the practices of sin than ever before in the history of the world.

The corrupt are becoming more scientific in their corruption, and more determined to practice corruption.

There are three great stubborn facts confronting us.

FIRST—The fact of sin. It is the most stubborn fact, the most awful fact, and the most destructive fact in the universe.

SECOND—The fact of salvation. There would be no salvation if we were not lost. You can't save something that hasn't been lost. The salvation provided by the blood of Christ is the only fact that is constructive, redemptive, and recreative.

THIRD—The stubborn fact of depraved, lost human nature. This great empty known as sinful man cannot be improved by external processes; he cannot be redeemed by education or evolution, or any other of the delusions. He can be saved only by the regenerating act of the Holy Ghost.

It is the duty of the church and of every minister of the gospel to preach the awfulness of sin, the absolute certainty and power of salvation, the judgment that awaits the unrepentant, and to denounce with all the power possible the heinous delusion that the world is growing better.

A wicked, wicked, Preacht! And reach the unwarmed, for they are growing worse—not better.

by UNCLE JOHN

My little niece has bobbed her hair—which makes her look a trifle queer about her upper story. . . . For she was mighty well supplied with what we call the woman's pride—in fact, her crownin' glory. . . . I couldn't say that she's improved, by whackin' off the curls I loved—

BOBBED HAIR—it makes her look so sassy! But—when she's had 'em off a spell, she may look sweeter—who can tell—or, maybe, twice as classy!

I'm shore-an-certain now, that I could never be induced to try to wear luxuriant tresses. . . . I wouldn't want to face a gale, with skypiece like a horse's tail, or hooked up in long dresses. . . . An' so, that little niece of mine can occupy the front row in front of my affections. . . . A fair-neck an' dumpled knee can shell my works, an' captur' me—in spite of all objections! But still—there's drawbacks to the game, and I tell you—

—it's use— to deny it.

Therefore, if I was Terry's Ma, or other dames that I have saw—I don't believe I'd try it!

AUTOCAST

WHEN you get a letter in trouble if it's left alone, it's a matter of fact, after a while, it will force it out, whether it comes in or out. It just don't matter there. One way or another it's going to get back to where it came from. When it does then both silver and stick are better off. They're stronger. The chances are both silver and stick must pass through all sorts of changes before they come again. That's the price you pay for getting away from where they're in.

It's always best to find out where we're at, not try to break the string we don't belong.
