The girls have made the seventh and eighth grade room gay with a border of butterflies and birds. Some of them may not look as Nature has painted them, but we will blame that to the lack of the proper colors of chalk rather than to the artistic ability of the girls.

The Boardman high school baseball team and plenty of rooters journeyed to Umatilla, Friday.

The game began with a good representation on both sides, at 3:30. Boardman made a slow beginning while Umatilla ran a fast score and up to the last inning was ahead. But the home team held her own, and the first of the ninth saw Boardman at bat for the last time. A few tense moments passed, then with two down and men on second and third, Boardman developed a home run king in the form of Alton Klitz, bringing three runs and fixing the score at 9-8 in our favor. Hurrah for Boardman High School!

Edd—Who gave you that fine cut on the side of your head, Mac?

Mac—Nobody gave it to me.

Edd (sharply)—Nobody? Be careful now!

Mac—Nope, nobody gave it to me. I got it in exchange for two black eyes and a bloody nose.

Loren—I see that the barbers are going to double the price of shaves.

Chat—Why are they doing it?

Loren—Well you see, the increased prices on everything has given the public such long faces that it's twice as much work to shave them.

Delbert—I had a good joke to tell you this morning, but I see you are not in a condition to receive it.

Doris—Why?

Delbert—Because if your face lights up, the powder will go off.

(Alton, entering a barber shop).

Barber—How will you have it cut, sir?

Alton—Both short.

Barber—Both? Hair and beard?

Alton—No; hair and conversation.

Earl—Mrs. Crowder, why has Mr. Lee so little hair?

Mrs. Crowder—Because he does so much thinking.

Earl—Then why do you have so much?

Mrs. Crowder—Earl, don't talk so much without permission.
