to Total of $1,420,962,438.

Washington, D. C. - The treasury collected income and profit taxes from 7,018,573 individuals and firms for the curce totaling $1,420,962,438.

A statistical report made public by the bureau of internal revenue shows that such revenue decreased approximately $1,250,000,000 from 1920 while there was a reduction of about 500,000 in the number of persons and irms making returns.

Of the total returns filed 6,662,176 were by individuals.

Reductions in the amounts of taxes paid and the number of returns filed as compared with 1920 extend all along the line from the persons paying taxes on income of $1000 to the maximum class of one million dollars or more. There were only 21 1920 the records show 33 persons admitted having incomes of "one mil-

That income was not reported by John D. Rockefeller. the net income turned in by Mr. Rockefeller for 1921 was only somewhere petween $1,000,000 and $1,500,000.

> This fact caused much surprise be ause it had generally been conceded hat one of four net incomes of $5,feller's income. Henry Ford and his wife and Mr. Ford's son Edsel Ford, and his wife, were supposed to have turned in two of the other record incomes in 1920. The identity of the fourth income return was in doubt. It is pretty well established by the statistical tables issued recently that the incomes of the Fords, father and son, dropped to about $3,000,000 to $4,000,-000 each in 1921, as compared with ver $5,000,000 in 1920.

WHY PINE TREES SIGH

LITTLE BROWN BEAR lay watching the stars twinkle and wink at him through the branches of the pine trees that grew just outside the door of the cave where he and Mother Bear lived, Little Brown Bear was not sleepy, for he had taken a very long afternoon nap. But he meant to lie still, just as his mother had told him to do, and not bother anyone by talking or moving about. He could hear his mother snoring at the other end of the cave.

By and by the wind began to blow and the pine tree began to sigh and toss its branches. Little Brown Bear liked to hear the pine tree sigh. Its sigh was soft and full of music and it often lulled Little Brown Bear to sleep.

But tonight Little Brown Bear was not sleepy. So he just lay quietly watching the stars wink and twinkle through the tossing branches and listening to the pine tree sighing in the wind.

"I wonder what makes the pine tree sigh," he said at last to himself. He lay quiet a little while longer. Then slowly and as quietly as a clumsy little brown bear can move he got up and walked out of the cave. "What makes the pine tree sigh?" he asked of a little worm that glowed in the dark.

But the little worm was stupid and could not help Little Brown Bear. Little Brown Bear heard a whire above his head and he looked up and saw a bat flying about. "Hello, bat," he cried. "Come down here a minute, will you?" That but flew down and lighted on a bush by the side of Little Brown

"You ought to be at home and in bed," said the bat, who was old,

"Well, then," said Little Brown Bear, "so ought you." "No, I always stay up at night," said the but. "You see, I sleep all day." "Well, don't be cross, please," said Little Brown Bear. "I want to ask you a question. What makes the pine tree sigh?" The bat listened. The pine tree close by was tossing its branches back and forth and was sighing softly.

The bat thought a moment. "Why, it's the wind that makes the pine tree sigh. Good-night, Little Brown Bear." "Oh, wait a minute," said Little Brown Bear. "I want to ask you more questions. Why does the wind make the pine tree sigh?"

"Oh, because it does," snapped the bat, getting cross, for he wanted to be off on his nightly travel. "Yes, but why does it?" still questioned Little Brown Bear, not at all satisfied with the answers.

"Well, I guess it is because it hasn't any fur coat or comfortable cave to sleep in. If you hadn't any, maybe you would sigh, too," said the bat, and off he flew.

Little Brown Bear was all alone The wind had blown the clouds until the stars were hidden. The pine tree sighed louder and louder and then the other trees began to sigh, too.

Little Brown Bear thought of his cave and his mother and off he shuffled for home and snuggled down in his bed of leaves close to his mother.

"I guess Mr. Bat is right," he said sleepily. "If I didn't have a nice fur coat and a nice cave to sleep in, I guess I would sigh like the pine tree."

"What are you talking about?" asked his mother, but Little Brown Bear was (6), 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE Drinking health to bride and groom, we wish them store of happy days,—Tennyson.

AT YOUR WEDDING

OFTEN it really seems as if the least important personage connected with the preparation for a large and festive wedding is the bridegroom. For one thing, strict social usage says that a bridegroom should not see his bride on the day of the wedding until the ceremony or immediately before it, so usually he remains at his own home, or a guest at the home of a friend or relative of the bride if he is marrying a young woman in another town, until all preparations for the wedding have been made. If any last-minute arrangements relative to the sending of luggage have to be made, they are attended to by his best man, who is a veritable go-between for the bridegroom and the bride's family on the day of the wedding. Before the day of the wedding the bridegroom-to-be should make inquiries of his bride concerning her bouquet and that of her attendants, for it is the privilege of the bridegroom to order these. He should never do it, however, without first consulting the bride, as the choice would naturally depend somewhat on the style of her wedding dress and the bridegroom's flowers would decidedly depend entirely on the color of their frocks. The bride's bouquet and the bouquets of all her attendants had best be dellyered at the home of the bride the morning of the wedding, but the bridegroom should see that each bouquet bears one of his personal cards.

Unless the bridegroom is married in the suit in which he wishes to travel later, he remembers to send to the home of the bride a suitcase containing his traveling suit and various dressing accessories. The bridegroom, as well as the bride, makes a special point to dress for the departure in an inconspicuous manner and would therefore lay aside the dress clothes, light gloves, etc., for a get-up more suitable for traveling.

Before the wedding the bridegroom should put the fee for the clergyman in a small white envelope and give it to his best man, who gives it back to the bridegroom after the ceremony, when he gives it to the clergymanof course in an inconspicuous manner.

Here is something that the bridegroom doesn't always remember to do, but it is something that is quite necessary, and that is to bid the moth and father of the bride good-by and to compliment the mother for the wedding entertainment, for he must remember that she is his hostess and that he is the most honored of her
