EXPERIMENT STATION NOTES
By H. K. Dean

Cost of Butterfat
The Oregon Experiment Station has recently completed an exhaustive study of the cost of producing butterfat. While these studies were for Willamette Valley conditions they bring out certain truths which apply to our conditions. It was found that the average production requirement per pound of butterfat, covering some 1500 cows, was succulents, 34 pounds; hay, 18 pounds; grain and millfeed, 8 pounds; labor, 45 minutes. These feeds gave a better balanced ration than we usually feed. The more nearly a ration is balanced to the cows' requirements the more economical is the production so it is likely that the total nutrients required to produce a pound of butterfat under our conditions, where in general we do not feed succulents or grain, is rather high. The limiting factor in our dairy success now is feeding. Until we have root crops or silage for winter feed and pastures for summer the ultimate success of the dairy industry is doubtful.

Ants' "Home-Brew"
Ants manufacture their own home-brew in their digestive canal by the action of yeasts on the milky juices which they extract from aphids or plant lice, which they keep for that purpose, according to Prof. Paul Lindner, chief of the fermenting industry institute in Berlin.

The "good old days" cover a multitude of things not so good. For example, the old-fashioned automobile with the rear entrance that opened occasionally and dumped the stout lady out upon the hard highway.

Earth's Central Core
Studies of varying velocity of earthquake tremors passing through the interior of the globe led Professor Wiechert of Holland to conclude that the earth consists of a central core of iron or steel, about 5,500 miles in diameter, surrounded by a stony shell nearly 1,000 miles in thickness. Between the outer solid rind and the inner layer of rock covering the metallic core, he thinks there is a layer of liquid or plastic material a little less than 20 miles below the earth's surface.

Explaining Battleground
"Boy, is this the field on which the great battle was fought?" asked the tourist.
"No, sir; that be at the top of the hill," replied the native boy.
"Dear, dear!" exclaimed the tourist; "that must be a mile away. Why didn't they fight it in this field?"
"I suppose because this 'ere field belongs to Farmer Johnson. He never would lend his field for anything, not even for the village sports."
