On Money

The dollar is the unit of measure upon which the United States monetary system is based. Gold is the unit of value throughout the world.

There are eight and one fourth billion dollars in gold in the world, fifty five per cent of which is in the U. S. Because of loss from abrasion, gold is in circulation to a very small extent. When gold is returned to the United States treasury from the banks one does not receive credit for the face value of the coins, but the value according to weight.

There are six hundred and one millions worth of gold in circulation. This is in two and a half, five, ten and twenty dollar pieces. The twenty dollar piece or the double eagle is considered the most beautiful coin in the world.

At one time one dollar gold pieces were minted but due to their inconvenience they have been called in. The gold certificates are much easier to handle than gold coin and they have the same value. That is: the government has placed in its treasury as many dollars in gold as the amount on the face of the certificates calls for.

Silver coin circulates mostly in the western states, especially the silver dollar. There is only fifty three cents worth of silver in a dollar. If they were made of a dollars worth of silver they would be larger and heavier. Therefore the government reserves 47 cents worth in silver for every dollar so that it is worth full value while in circulation.

Back of the silver certificate, the most beautiful piece of paper money in the world, the government has placed enough silver in the treasury to make the certificate good for its face value.

In 1890 treasury notes were issued by the treasury department on authority of the government. These were certificates of credit, and were made legal tender for all private and public debts except duties on imports and interest on the public debt.

Subsidiary coins, known as chicken feed are all made of silver except the penny or one cent piece, which is of copper. These coins are made in 50, 25, 10, 5, and 1 cent pieces.

The government issued greenbacks during the civil war. The back of the bills were green, thus the origin of the name. Due to the surplus amount of paper money on hand, and the small amount of gold in the treasury, the greenbacks fell in value to only forty cents on the dollar. This was remedied by the issuance of spec money.

National notes are issued by the U. S. Treasury to any national bank using its surplus money to buy government bonds. These banks are given credit for the price of the bonds in National bank notes having the name of the banks on them.

Federal Reserve notes and Federal Reserve bank notes are issued on the national reserve bank.

When we accept money, especially currency we show our unflinching faith in the government for we believe it will keep its promise in keeping its money at full value.

To Save Chestnut Forests.

Legislation to prevent the rapid cutting of chestnut forests in France is being urged to restrain floods, prevent washouts, and protect the electric power of the rivers.

Very Likely.

We don't know the habits that would make us live a hundred years; and if we did, we'd probably neglect them.

And They Like It.

In England, if Mr. Coolidge were Premier, somebody else would be picking out a new cabinet, yet in America the President can override Congress, steam roll the convention, ignore the party pledges and not only retain his power but even gain public favor. The American people are so surprised to find a public leader who knows what he wants and what he doesn't want that they have confidence in him and are enthusiastic over retaining him. Coolidge is the first definite fixed star that has happened in the political heavens since Theodore Roosevelt last shouted, "Bully."

The editorial minds of some of our big daily papers must have never studied the psychological effect of the "reverse English" complex. They are either playing for the sole applause of their own supporters, or else are willfully abetting the enemy. Otherwise they need a course in practical psychology.

Man first crawled, then walked then he straddled a horse, then built a boat and rode the waves, he captured steam and bought a pullman berth. Henry invented his road post incubator and man "stepped on it". And now he leaves the earth to commune with the clouds and the stars as he flies around the world. And yet there are men so dead as to themselves have said, "It can't be done."

Capite Florem

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WE were in Houston, Nancy and I, when I saw a beautiful picture in a shop window. I wanted to go in and buy it at once—the price was cheap beyond belief, it seemed to me, but Nancy urged delay. I yielded as all well-trained husbands do, but though I have been to Houston several times since and have visited shops elsewhere and peered in eagerly at windows, I have never found a picture quite so much to my liking; I should have bought the one which first satisfied me.

An old neighbor of mine had long looked forward to a visit to California and the Northwest. He delayed, going, not because he could not afford the trip, but simply because he hoped that next year conditions would be more favorable, or he could get away more easily, or he would enjoy the vacation more; but he never took the journey. He is hopelessly ill now, so that he will never have the pleasure which could easily have been his, and he is not now able to enjoy the retrospect of it.

We waste many precious hours in the contemplation of future recreations and enjoyments which may never come to us, when we might be getting happiness from the opportunities that are immediately around us. We delude ourselves with the hope that sometime in the future we shall have more time or be in better position for the enjoyment of life than today—when we are through college, when we have a good job, when the children are grown, when we have more money—forgetting that those people who have most money and most leisure are frequently the most discontented and unhappy.

We shall none of us be in a better position to enjoy ourselves than we are today; few of us, so long as we keep our strength and our faculties, at least, will ever have so much leisure for enjoyment or so great opportunity for happiness as right now.

I have always admired the courage of a dear friend of mine. She had for years wanted a handsome set of mahogany dining room furniture, but being in moderate circumstances did not feel that she could quite afford to throw away the substantial but ugly one she had. She was left a little legacy, and instead of putting it out at interest, as perhaps she should have done, she bought the beautiful mahogany which she had so desired. She died within a year, and I've always been glad that she had those months of happiness and satisfaction in her purchase.

It is the part of wisdom, of course, to look forward to the future and to prepare for it; most of us take too little thought for the morrow, but the flowers of happiness and enjoyment are about us every day; we do not need to wait for the distant future to pick them. If we refuse them today they may be like my picture—we may never have a chance at them again.

helping Eastern Oregon get rid of the rabbit pest. More rapid extermination would follow mixing a few alfalfa leaves with the crushed rock whenever the roads need re-surfacing. A fur coated highway ought to ride easy.

It's a notable fact that merchants who advertise generally ride in good automobiles, have electric lights in their modern homes and first class merchandise on their shelves.

The fellow who don't want anything ain't worth much no matter what he's got.

Someday, maybe, our Eastern Oregon boys and girls will have an opportunity to secure higher education without becoming webfooted.

This Is Republican Year
Support the Entire Party TicketIT'S COOLIDGE--
Make It Unanimous

Every indication shows overwhelming sentiment for Coolidge. The Literary Digest straw vote, both in this state and the nation, shows him at this writing leading his nearest opponent by more than two to one.

In urging votes for Coolidge, we ask Oregon citizens to elect to the congress men who will aid the President in carrying out the platform pledges.

YOU WILL FIND THOSE MEN ON THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

Senator McNary deserves reelection. He has accomplished much for Oregon. Congressmen Hawley and Sinnott should be returned because of service to their state. Maurice E. Crumpacker, candidate for the seat of the democratic incumbent in the third district, should receive the votes of all republicans.

RESTORE THIS STATE TO CONTROL OF THE DOMINANT PARTY

It is important that all good citizens vote for Sam A. Koser, candidate for reelection as secretary of state, and Thomas R. Kay, candidate for state treasurer, because their election will restore the affairs of Oregon, a strongly republican state, to republican control.

Through the accident of death, the governor has named his own state treasurer. This is an elective office and the people had elected a republican treasurer. By the appointment, Governor Pierce sized power not his by right and thereby dominates the state board of control. The balance will be restored by election of Koser and Kay.

OTHER CANDIDATES, TOO, ARE WORTHY OF VOTERS' SUPPORT

Judge Harry H. Belt, of Polk County, and Judge Percy R. Kelly of Linn County, are both able jurists and candidates of the party for justices of the supreme court, Judge Kelly being a candidate to succeed the late John McCourt. Both are eminently qualified.

I. H. VanWinkle, candidate for reelection as attorney-general; H. H. Corey, candidate for reelection as public service commissioner; Edward Ostrander, candidate for public service commissioner; and J. D. Mickle, candidate for reelection as state dairy and food commissioner, as well as the complete legislative and full county tickets, vouched for by the republican party, are worthy of support and deserve your votes.

Make Sure You Vote November 4

Republican State Central Committee;

I. L. Patterson, Chairman. John W. Cochran, Secretary.
