Twenty Years After

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

FULLER and I were talking about his college course which was soon to be ended, and Fuller is going out within a few days to see what he can do in the world.

"I wonder where I'll be and what I'll be doing twenty years from now," he said. "It seems to me a good deal of a gamble," he continued, "whether one succeeds or simply lives a commonplace existence."

"Well, it does seem so, sometimes," I admitted, "but I don't believe it is. Experience has shown me that you get out of life just about what you have put into it."

"What do you mean?" he asked, and I tried to tell him.

Our minister told the story last Sunday of a preacher who went with his little son to supply a pulpit. There was no collection taken during the church service, but at the door as you entered there was a contribution box into which the parishioners dropped whatever they wished to contribute, and into this box as he was going into the church the minister dropped a half dollar.

After the service, the deacon in charge explained that it was the custom in that church to give the preacher whatever was found in the box, which when he had opened he found to contain a half dollar. The preacher and his little son were silent as they were riding home until finally the boy, looking up into his father's face, said naively, "Father, if you had put more into that box, you'd have gotten more out."

And that's the way with life. What you put in is what you are going to get out in later years. The men who are failures in the affairs of youth are, in general, failures afterwards. I am convinced that whatever Fuller is doing twenty years from now he will be doing in the same general way that he tackled his studies in college, for most of us have settled down to a definite moral and intellectual pace at twenty, which we find it difficult materially to increase or to diminish.

Bible Thoughts for the Week

Sunday.
Remember Now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them. Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.—Eccles. 12:1, 13.

Monday.
Owe No Man Any Thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.—Rom. 13: 8, 10.

Tuesday.
The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: thou maintainest my lot. The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage.—Ps. 16:5, 6.

Wednesday.
Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.—Gal. 6:1.

Thursday.
This is the Confidence that we have in Him, that, if we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us.—I John 5:14

Friday.
Eye Hath Not Seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him.—I Cor. 2:9.

Saturday.
Thou Art My Lamp, O Lord: and the Lord will lighten my darkness. For by thee I have run through a troop; by my God have I leaped over a wall.—II Sam. 22:29, 30.

Coolidge Names New Secretary.

Penitentes a Strange Sect
The Penitentes, or Penitent Brothers, were once very numerous in New Mexico. They were Mexicans—very ignorant and fanatic ones.

Their strange brotherhood—a remnant and perversion of the penitent orders of the Middle Ages—was active only forty days in the year, the forty days before Lent. At that time they flogged their own naked backs with cruel scourges of aloë fiber, carried enormous crosses, lay on beds of cactus, and performed similar self-tortures, making pilgrimages thus. On Good Friday they redoubled their ghastly efforts, and finally crucified, upon a real cross, one of their number who was chosen by lot.

In the Middle Ages nearly the whole of Europe had a strange epidemic—a fever of penitential self-whipping. The Flagellants, as they were called, paraded the streets, lashing themselves with scourges, or used the whip at home. Even kings caught the infection, and abused their own royal backs. It took centuries to eradicate this remarkable custom. — Detroit

 Your Conversation  "GIANT DESPAIR"

At one time or another most of us are taken prisoner by Giant Despair. Giant Despair is described in Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" as the Lord of Doubting Castle. When he discovered Christian and Hopeful sleeping on his grounds he promptly clapped them both into his subdungeon. Only the unwary ever trespass on his territory.

Neckwear Tones Up Spring's Plain Frocks

Once again spring blithely presents as with plain and simple frocks and blouses for daytime wear, leaving it to resourceful women to make them interesting somehow. And the feminine world manages very well by means of neckwear, collar and cuff sets, and belt, that ring changes on the theme of simple styles.

The picture above shows how plaid and plain taffeta ribbon make colorful neckwear that will add chic to the most unpretentious of gowns. Narrow plain ribbon is set on to wider plaid with a little gold braid, and they are laid in fine plaits. The narrow ribbon is used for binding and for the ties.

Lichens Are Descendants of Prehistoric Growth

The world has more than once been startled by reports that a descendant of the monster animals which inhabited the earth before the Ice age has been seen either lifting its head out of the ocean depths or lurking in the darkness of a primeval forest.

Hitherto none of these reports has been confirmed. But when we come to plant life we find in the lichens real prehistoric growths. The lichens we can see and examine today are similar to those which existed tens of thousands of years ago.

The growths which spread themselves over rocks and old walls are a combination of a fungus and countless thousands of algae. The fungus, unable to make its own way in the world, has enmeshed huge numbers of green algal cells, living on the food material which they produce.

That many of these plants are tens of thousands of years old is proved by the fact that by scraping away the crust of lichens the abrasions caused by the passage of ice during the glacial period are as fresh as though they had been made recently. The lichen has protected them from the weather ever since. The glacial age is said by some scientists to have ended over 80,000 years ago.—London TH-Bits.

Every Inhabitant of Town Helps Make Muslin

Practically everybody in the little town of Tarare, with its 12,000 inhabitants, in central France, recently referred to in The Way, is interested in the making of muslin. Quite half the population are actual workers in the mills or in their homes, where muslin is either made on household looms or covered with most beautiful embroidery.

Although the population of Tarare has diminished in recent years the muslin industry is still very remunerative, and there are some streets in which one's guide will point to the houses of men who (in France) are multi-millionaires—men of great wealth who continue to live side by side with less fortunate citizens, who "thee" and "thou" their rich neighbors as they pass them in the streets. All these people are ready to admit that they owe their prosperity and livelihood to the work and perseverance of M. Antoine Simonet; but they will also tell one that something is due to the water of the river Turdine, which gives the light cotton materials of Tarare certain incomparable qualities as regards texture and color which are recognized by women the world over.—Detroit News.
