THE ARMY OF THE UNEMPLOYED

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

CLIFFORD was wanting to leave college, though he was doing well and was only in the middle of his junior year. His mother was a widow, he explained to me, and she was working hard. It was not that her work was unpleasant, or that the task she was performing was an undue tax upon her strength. Clifford did not like the idea of her working. It was a humiliation to him, and he felt that he should himself go to work at once and so be able to support the two of them.

"How old is your mother?" I asked. "Forty-eight."

"Is she well?" "She is quite well and strong, and she doesn't mind working, only I don't like her having to do it. I'd rather she had nothing to do."

He had the idea that a person with nothing to do would be more respectable and happier than one who has a regular daily task to perform. Unemployment brings leisure, he argued, and leisure begets contentment.

Quite the contrary is true. I know that many people look forward to the time when they will be through with toil, when they can give up business and retire to a life of ease and unemployment and happiness, but such people, if they realize this ambition of having nothing to do, seldom find in complete leisure the joy and the contentment which they anticipated.

I have known a few men who after a life of activity in business or in a profession gave up their work, retired and settled down to do nothing. They were in most cases unhappy and longed for the old activity to which they had been used. They had too much time to think, and thinking grew tiresome. Most of them, having no active interest left in life, folded their hands shortly and died--died with a longing for something to do. The unemployed are seldom happy, whether this condition is the result of circumstances or of their own deliberate choice.

I sat for a time not long ago in a hotel filled with widows and maiden ladies, and wives without household obligations except to sew on a few buttons or to crochet a strip of insertion for a guest towel or to knit a sweater to be laid away in tissue paper. They were to a woman gossip and critical and like a bunch of cats, ready to scratch over the first bone thrown into their midst. Not one of them was really happy, though each might have been had she had some definite and regular thing to do. They were all strong enough to work; some of them felt, perhaps, that they would have lost social prestige by doing so; some had no ambition. For some of them, unfortunately, was there any economic necessity, and so they continued in unemployed discontent.

Clifford's mother kept her job and was happy, and he finished his education.

And as a result of Saturday's storm, housewives are busy trying to restore their households to order once more and make room for sand and more sand.

NEW SETTLERS ARE LACKING IN CAPITAL

Washington, D. C.—Only 10 per cent of prospective settlers on reclamation projects have cash capital of more than $2500.

Settlers on new projects investigated in Oregon, Washington, Utah, Nevada and Wyoming should have from $4000 to $7000 to succeed.

This is the summary of economic reports made by experts as announced by Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation.

The statement results from a study of the reports made by representatives of the reclamation service collaborating with local committees of bankers and business men. The conclusion of all those participating came to the same result, Mead said, pointing out that local interests are found to concur with the outside investigators.

The problem presented, in his view, is making up in credit the difference between the capital the would-be settler has available and the sum he needs to see him through. Men with $1500 to $3000 can be secured in reasonable number, he says, and the federal or the state government must step forward with the advances which settlers must have.
