Big Business on National Forests

That over one million dollars were received from the National forests of Oregon and Washington during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, is shown by a statement just issued by the U. S. Forest Service. These receipts accrued from the sales of Government timber, grazing fees, special use permits and other miscellaneous business.

Under existing laws, 25 percent of all National Forest receipts are returned to the States in which they accrue, for the road and school fund. An additional ten percent is made available for use by the Forest Service for road and trail work. This in an interesting contrast with some of the European countries having crown or national forests. In Sweden for instance it is said only 3 and 3-10% of the Crown forest receipts are returned to the local communes.

According to the report, the total receipts from the fourteen National Forests in Oregon for the fiscal year 1925, amount to $675,114.12. This would make a total of $168,778.53 due to the State under the 25 percent fund, and $67,511.41 to be available under the 10 percent fund.

The wonderful pre-fall weather, following summer's heat, is upon us. This is the kind of weather that, like Spring, makes a fellow want to be up and doing—but unlike the blithe-some Spirit of Spring the Fall flavors of some mystic hurry, some urge to get ready for the unknown winter, which always descends without warning in its white blanket and catches us with only half a pile of wood and not enough apples in the basement.

Are you making the most out of the melon season? Right here in the heart of one of the best melon producing sections in the northwest, we ought to feast to the utmost while the season is ripe for it is a long year till melon time again.

How about saving the biggest pumpkin, melon, garden truck or flowers, for the coming fall. If everyone will get behind the idea and personally do everything in their power to help put over a real fair and agricultural exhibit, we can stage a show that will draw the crowds from miles around. Let the kids help too.
