What If the Spangle Sewers Strike?

(Written for the United Press.)
 By Margaret Rohe.

The city clocks were striking when I saw a lovely maid stroll proudly from a bonnet shop in smart attire arrayed. I hastened to the hat shop man. "Who is that striking creature?" "You said it," was his prompt reply. With rage in every feature. "You've said it in those very words. There's nothing more to say. She's my most striking model. And she's gone on strike today."

NEW YORK—Now that life is just one strike after another, followers of Fashion are doing pretty well to keep clothed sufficiently to stay in the procession at all without shifting attire to fit the modes of the moment. Strikes of longshoremen, miners and milkmen sink into mere insignificance when such truly appalling strikes are on like those of the spangle sewers, garment fitters or milliners, male and female.

A spangle sewers' strike would be particularly harrowing just at the moment since all the newest evening creations seem to consist merely of a shining spangle cuirass or stomacher held in suspense by a strand of beads over each shoulder and down to the belt in back. The skirts are mere billows of airy tulle with particular emphasis and billows laid on the hips. All black dance frocks on this order developed in jet and black tulle are the most popular of the lot, but vivid creations in cerise, jade, gold and silver are guaranteed to turn our ballrooms into replicas of scenes from Zeigfeld's Follies at its best.

These newest tulle and spangle evening creations are making good on the backless rumors we had from

WHERE'S THE FIRE?
 There goes the whistle. The truck is on the go—where? Perhaps to a private home—perhaps to a business house. It may be a small blaze, or it may already be past control—BUT there IS a fire! That's what the fire whistle tells you and your heart jumps faster.
 Many times that call may be answered—and NOT before your home or your business. But once—just that vital once—may prove the greatest disaster of your life. Suppose it comes today—tomorrow, who can tell when? Are you fully insured? Why take the chances? A few dollars invested in a fire policy today may save you a thousand tonight. Write, phone or call.

or light frocks when they are of some vivid and hectic shade themselves. The sombre plumes of the black feather fan are of course stunning with any color. There is a strong suspicion however that a new use for the fan will be evolved this winter. Instead of wielding them coquettishly or languorously in front to create a draft they will be held unfurled at the back in the manner of the Spanish beauty having her picture taken.

This in a mad effort to keep off the drafts from unduly exposed shoulder blades and spinal columns.

FUR TRAPPING BEGUN
 SALEM, Nov. 8.—Fur trapping in Oregon will be done this season more extensively than ever before, it is anticipated by State Game Warden Carl

Gaby Deslys brought over one for every gown, each a dream of beauty and lavish handwork more ornate and artistic than the other. This year indeed she seems to be making a collection of scarves rather than pearls.

Spanish mantillas in white or black are very much used as scarves and the smaller gaily embroidered Spanish and Chinese shawls of silk crepe heavily fringed are also most effective. Oriental scarves heavy with metallic embroidery, lined with softest puffed chiffon, lined they scratch a bit, are most opulent looking, banded with rich fur and entire all-over spangled lengths to match the paillette bodice of your gown are radiant beyond words.

Feather fans are more enormous than ever this season and make most effective notes of color against black

D. Shoemaker, who says that high prices will be a special inducement. Already 618 licenses have been issued and this is probably less than half of what will be sent out this winter. The season is open from November 1 to February 28, and is for trapping otter, mink, fisher, marten and muskrat. Owing to the lull in trapping activities during the war these animals are unusually plentiful in the coast and mountain country.

This in a mad effort to keep off the drafts from unduly exposed shoulder blades and spinal columns.

Coal and Wood Heaters
Economical, Durable

Try a
Simplex Universal Combination Range

You can use it for gas in the summer and when the weather gets cold use wood or coal for fuel all in the same stove. There are no parts to change in turning from one fuel to the other. It is simple enough for a child.

Three Ranges in One and but One to Buy

A twist of the key in one direction elevates the gas burner flush with the bottom of the oven, opens the exit in the top, turns on the gas—all automatically. A turn of the key in the opposite direction and the gas is turned off, the burner lowered, the exit closed and the range ready for coal or wood.

Come in and take a look at the Best Combination range on earth. We will take pleasure in showing you.
