How to Make Cream Candies at Home

The cream candies of the confectioner always seem beyond the skill of the unprofessional candy maker. There are many interesting principles to be learned regarding the cooking of sugar, and it is probably one of the most uncertain substances to work with. It is easily affected by the atmospheric conditions and it is wise to select a clear day to experiment with the cooking of sugar syrup for candies.
However, if the following directions are studied and carefully followed it will be possible for the inexperienced candy maker to make a variety of cream candies.
The base or foundation for this type of candy is called "fondant," and can be used for an almost endless variety of combinations.
Directions Given for Making of Fondant
To make this fondant take 4 cups of granulated sugar, 1/2 tea-spoon of cream of tartar and 2 cups of boiling water. Put the sugar and cream of tartar in a saucepan, add the boiling water and stir until sugar is dissolved.
The mixture should be stirred slowly from the center of the pan in order to avoid having grains of sugar gather on the sides of the saucepan. The saucepan must be kept free from sugar or the fondant will become "grainy."
Cover the kettle until boiling point is reached, then remove and cook until the syrup will form a "soft ball" when dropped in cold water. This takes about ten minutes. When cooked remove from fire at once and set aside to cool in the pan it was cooked in.
Emphasis Placed on Cooling Syrup Evenly
It is most important that the syrup should cool evenly, therefore do not hasten the process by pouring it into another dish or by putting the saucepan into cold water.
When cool, but not too cold, stir vigorously with a spatula or flat wooden spoon, until the syrup has changed to a white, creamy, glossy paste. When too stiff to stir, turn onto a board and knead.
The lightness of the fondant depends upon the amount of kneading, as this part of the process cannot be overdone.
When light and creamy, place in an earthen bowl or jar, cover with I GET THE BEARD BUT LEAVE THE ROOTS
I'm not after the "pound of flesh"—I leave the roots to continue their growth.
"You are next."

ASHLAND HAS PLACE IN TOURIST BOOK

The "Photomobile Tourist" is the name of a wonderfully attractive publication issued by the Photomobile Tourist association of Seattle, and is an illustrated guide book of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. The book provides information to the automobile tourist, covering the main routes of motor travel in these three states, giving road data and reproduction of photographs taken from an automobile.
This book contains among other impressively beautiful scenes of the great out of doors depicted in the Northwest, a number of attractive pictures of Ashland's park and the free auto camp. Accompanying these views of Ashland's famous beauty spot is an interesting pen picture of the resort written by Lynn D. Mowat, secretary of the Ashland Commercial Club.
In the description of the auto camp grounds in the cities of the three states, the book states that, "As for Oregon, no city in the Northwest can claim a better city camping ground than Ashland."
As only the most prominent and attractive sections of the three states from a scenic standpoint are enlarged upon in the book, Ashland may feel much pardonable pride in the recognition bestowed upon her.

Most Indispensable Household Utility in Modern Home-Making
It would be difficult for you to suggest to yourself any household utility which could contribute more thoroughly to the economy and convenience of your home-making routine than a Maytag, and it solves the servant problem to a nicety, as it takes away all the hardships of the old fashioned tub.
Electricity Drives This Maytag
The wonderful Maytag Washer is operated by electricity. All that is necessary is to insert the connecting plug in an ordinary light socket, put in the clothes, hot water and soap, and turn the button. The motor operates both washer and wringer.
There is absolutely nothing about the machine that is complicated. So simple, in fact, that a child can operate it.
It handles the finest fabrics and the daintiest laces as well as the heavy family woollens, quilts, overalls, etc. In the saving on the clothes alone, it is a wise investment. It will wash a tub full of dirty clothes in from ten to fifteen minutes.
Let us give you a demonstration.
