COMMUNITY CLUB MET AT BELLEVUE

Friday evening the Community Club in the Bellevue district held their monthly meeting at the school house. A musical program had been prepared by a committee composed of Miss Jessie Whyte, Mary Homes Tucker and Lee McWilliams. It is not often that the people of a neighborhood have the privilege of listening to an entertainment of such real merit as was rendered.

The young people of the Bellevue district have been associated with the Ashland young people in the Ashland school and it was a pleasing feature of the meeting to have a goodly number of the high school pupils as guests of Bellevue. The help they so generously gave in the program was greatly appreciated by all. The old school house rang with their young voices, helped out by the older people in a "community sing" led by Mr. Grover. These songs are a pleasing feature of every Bellevue meeting. Later the young people gathered around the piano and it would be hard to determine who enjoyed the hour the more, the group about the piano giving expression to the life and joy, the sparkle and buoyancy of youth, or the older people seated about the room in little groups chatting together and at the same time drinking in the uplifting inspiration that comes from the touch of fresh young lives full of hopefulness and promise.

So the evening wore quickly away, with a touch of apple pie, ice cream and coffee to take care of the organ that lies so close, in proverb, to the heart.

Nearly 100 persons were present. It is a hope of the community that many more such meetings may be held and that the school house may become a center where neighbors may meet, the young people may invite their friends, where an open house may be kept for all those who have the interests of Bellevue at heart.

FRUIT TREES NOT BADLY DAMAGED

Winter injury to fruit trees in Oregon is less severe than was indicated in earlier reports, according to Dr. E. M. Harvey, research professor of horticulture at the college, who inspected orchards at Medford, Ashland, McMinnville, and other parts of the state.

"Greatest injury is noticed in the lower and central sections of the Willamette valley," says Dr. Harvey. "In these sections the damage was due to the fact that trees had not properly reached a dormant state of growth and were thereby more susceptible to injury from frost. The upper Willamette valley and Columbia basin came through almost intact as the trees were in a better state of dormancy."

An optimistic view of conditions in Southern Oregon is held by Professor Harvey. Only a few isolated trees show fatal injury. No extensive damage is reported from the commercial orchards of the Umpqua and Rogue River valleys. "In the Willamette valley," continues Prof. Harvey, "the discoloration of cambium tissue on south side of trees just above snow line caused alarm to fruit growers. This discoloration has cial organizations are welcoming women to their ranks, their memberships being on exactly the same basis as that of men. The fact that the modern Chamber of Commerce takes up so many different kinds of civic work accounts for the interest of the women. Committees of women of ten handle such matters as city cleanup campaigns, agitation for the improvement of the educational system, better sewage and sanitation ordinances, parks and public playgrounds work, medical inspection in the schools, visiting nurses and similar subjects. "Women have found there is no better nor quicker way of securing action on matters of this kind than through an organization like the Commercial Club, and hence their interest in it."
