A petition is being circulated in Ashland today regarding the fire whistle, which has developed the unpleasant habit of blowing at intervals day or night, rousing people out of their sleep with the idea that the town is on fire. The petition will be presented to the city council, asking them to either have it fixed so it will only blow in case of fire, or if that cannot be done, to have it removed entirely. As it is at present, it is a great nuisance, especially to those living nearby. The petition is being signed by a large number of the business people of the city.

Birthday Dinner. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bechtel entertained at dinner Thursday evening in honor of the latter's birthday anniversary. In the evening music was enjoyed, after which the guests were served with ice cream and a portion of the huge marble birthday cake. Those present at this delightful affair were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Bechtel and children, Iona and Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bechtel.

Celebrated Wedding Anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Fansteel of Madison, Calif., arrived in Ashland Saturday by automobile and will spend several weeks here, guests at the home of Mrs. Fansteel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Patterson, on North Main street. Sunday was the second anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Fansteel's wedding day, and the occasion was observed with a large dinner party at the Patterson home. About twenty participated in the event.

Picnicked on Table Rock. A party of Ashland people drove down the valley yesterday and held a picnic on Table Rock. After eating on the summit of the rock, a period was spent exploring that historic scene and admiring the wonderful view witnessed from the elevation. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dardorff and daughter, Tom Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hicks and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Middleton. The storm of the later afternoon overtook them while coming down from the rock, but they gained their automobiles at the valley without much inconvenience.

Temptation Windows. In a small Indiana town the Methodist church has stained glass windows on the bottom panels of which are printed verses of Scripture. One that six-year-old Willie has been able to decipher, and from the effort remembers well, goes: "And lead us not into temptation."

Not long after, his mother took him to visit an old friend who had built an expensive new home. Now, in the hall there were two high windows and both of them were made of orange-colored glass. When they entered that room Willie stared and stared but said nothing. But that night when he told his father all about the new house he remembered the orange windows and said: "Oh, dad, they're awfully religious. They've got those windows that keep out temptation."

FARM LABORERS STRIKE AGAINST "SUNSET HOUR" SANTIAGO, Chile.—The first farm laborers' strike in Chile was called recently by several hundred workers on the 20,000-acre estate of an English woman near here. While the actual movement was confined to one farm and involved a relatively small number of men, it attracted widespread interest and has been pointed out as marking the beginning of a new era in the existing relations between the land proprietor and the Chilean agricultural laborer. The immediate cause of the trouble, it is said, was the refusal of the laborers to continue working until sunset during harvest, according to the long established custom in this country. The provincial governor investigated the strike and announced "there had been a current of propaganda passing between the Chilean federation of labor and workers on various farms in the department." The workers also demanded increased wages, dismissal of the overseers and the right to organize. The latter was granted, and the dispute finally was settled after President Alessandri had admonished the men to return to the fields.

FARM LABORERS STRIKE AGAINST "SUNSET HOUR"

The "inquilino" system prevails on most of the large estates, which form a characteristic feature of the farming region of central Chile. Under the system, the worker is given possession of a plot of land for purposes of cultivation, a house and rights of pasturage. On the estate where the strike took place the daily wages were 80 centavos (about 15 cents at normal exchange).

The South Pacific Mail, discussing the strike, says "relations between the employer and employe on the farms hitherto have been somewhat patriarchal. The patron has been the ultimate court of appeal, and it might be said, absolute master of the liberties, if not the lives, of the peasantry, who are linked to these estates by the 'inquilino' system. On the great haciendas (farms) the laborers and their families have remained for many years in a virtual state of feudal servitude. It is not surprising, therefore, that at the present day, when the self-consciousness of the worker all over the world has awakened, that the Chilean peon should seek some amelioration of his often hard lot."

The owner of the estate where the laborers went on strike said the walk-out was the direct result of action of "subversive elements." She declared she had provided her employes with good homes, schools and medical attendance.

Brought All He Could Find. Evidently George had had quite a Serious Spill From Bicycle He Had Rented.

Bill Spokes, a second-hand bicycle man, was a just man and usually slept the sleep of the just, but one night his saintly slumbers were disturbed by a voice hailing him below his window. "What's wrong?" he called out, drowsily. "D'you remember lending George Smith a machine this afternoon?" piped the voice. "That's right," said the bicycle man; "but I ain't going to take it in at this time of night. George will have to keep the machine till mornin', and pay by the hour."

"Yes, of course," agreed the voice from below; "that's fair. But George had a bit of a spill through running into a motorcar, and he don't want to pay for the hire of more'n he can help. I've brought round all we can find of the machine so far."

At that the second-hand bicycle man jumped from his bed and rushed angrily to the window. "And what have you found?" he shouted. "It's coming up!" piped the voice, and an oil can settled into the room.—Boston Globe.

Tree's Peculiar Growth. Trees that grow with a spiral twist, concealing a popelike fiber under a straight bark, are not unknown, but are generally regarded as arboreal curiosities. A recent instance in which a pine tree of this curious formation, discovered through the agency of a lightning stroke, is reported by W. M. Kern, of New York city. The bolt, in its downward course, circled the trunk seven times, leaving a spiral channel in which a man's arm could be laid, and disclosing the fact that the grain of the wood followed the same helical lines, though the bark and limbs appeared normal.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

SEEMED FUNNY TO PERUVIAN

South American Unable to Understand Why Republicans Did Not Seize the White House. One day a Peruvian friend came to me in great excitement, waving a newspaper. "Senior," he cried, "there is a revolution in the United States."

"What do you mean?" He showed me the paper. It contained a brief account of the Republican convention in Chicago, in which Senator Lodge said several uncomplicated things about President Wilson.

"You see," explained the Peruvian, "the President's enemies openly attack him. Is the army disloyal? Why do they not suppress the demonstration?" I explained to him that in the United States it is any citizen's privilege to abuse the Chief Executive to his heart's content, that no effort is made either by the army or by the President himself to check such demonstrations, and that the Republican party would wait patiently until March 4 instead of descending in a body upon the White House and forcibly ejecting Mr. Wilson. He smiled in polite incredulity. "What funny people!" he laughed. His own President had gained office by the more simple expedient of first winning the good-will of the army, then walking into the official palace to hand the former incumbent a ticket on the first steamer out of town.—Leslie's.

AIR GLIDERS IN COMPETITION

Remarkable Speed Attained at Recent Meeting in the Rhine District of Germany. A German gliding and soaring competition was recently held in the Rhine district by the League of German Model Aircraft and Gliding Clubs. The meeting was marred by an unfortunate accident, resulting in the death of the well-known pilot, Von Loessel. This was due to breaking in the air at the elevator of his glider. A number of monoplane and biplane were entered, reports the Scientific American, some of very novel design. Many of the entries had comfortable seats and landing gear as distinguished from the old-time gliders in which the operator's legs swung from below the planes, ready to take up the strain of hard landing, often at the price of serious injuries. The longest distance covered by the gliders was 1,880 meters, with a duration of 142.5 seconds. That record was made by Klemperer, with a height of 830 meters. The apparent gliding angle of Klemperer's flight was one in thirty-one.

More Than Two Years En Route.

In June, 1918, some Canadian soldiers, crossing the Atlantic to join the forces in Europe, threw overboard in mid-ocean a sealed bottle with a note inside to the effect that they were on their way to the war and asking the finder of the bottle to forward the note to the Toronto Sunday World. The bottle has just been washed ashore at St. Ives in Cornwall and the request has been carried out. What would be interesting to know would be where the bottle has been during the last two years and a half, and what is the drift that brings so much kitesam and jetsam into the harbor of the little fishing town on the Atlantic. There are many theories, one of which credits the Gulf stream with a memory for the old smuggling days and an intention, in the case of the Canadians' bottle, to show awareness of these good new days which find fresh uses for things of unlovely repute.

IDEAL LIGHTING.

According to an illuminating engineer, what is wanted today in home illumination is the sort of good lighting that is found on the shady side of a tree on a sunny afternoon. Substitute for the sun a new 100-watt lamp, for the sky the creamy ceiling of a living room and for the tree an opalescent disk or bowl from the ceiling you now get a soft radiance which floods the entire room as though it were opened to the sky; from the diffusing disk you get a generous addition of light directly beneath having the quality of filtered sunlight. You have approximated the charming effect of mellow radiance that was apparent under the tree.

TARIFF CONGRESS MEETS WITH VAST PROGRAM

(Continued from Page One) mission at the extra session of the Senate in March. The shipping board and other important posts are also to be filled.

Indicating their intention of putting the Harding program through as quickly as possible, Senate leaders have determined to impose the closure rule, limiting debate with respect to the emergency tariff bill. This may cause a long wrangle, with the Democrats stoutly opposing it. Development of Harding's foreign policy may engage the Senate's attention before the session ends, though the present desire is to dispose first of domestic questions. The question of a separate peace with Germany, through adoption of the Knox resolution or some substitute repealing the declaration of war, will come to the front soon after the session convenes, no matter what Harding's position on the question is. There is strong sentiment for adoption of such a resolution, and its discussion will doubtless revive in a measure at least the league of nations debate.
