What Constitutes Advertising!
 In order to allay a misunderstanding among some as to what constitutes news and what advertising, we print this very simple rule which is used by newspapers to differentiate between them: "ALL future events, where an admission charge is made or a collection is taken IS ADVERTISING." This applies to organizations and societies of every kind as well as to individuals.

All reports of such activities after they have occurred is news.

All coming social or organization meetings of societies where no money contribution is solicited, initiation charged, or collection taken is NEWS.

Congress is going to have peace with Germany if it has to fight for it. And there will be a fight, from present indications, before house and senate become reconciled.

Europe's war fever seems to be abating. Now if the infection of peace would spread, over there, with the germs of industrial activity, all would be well.

California keeps in stock, so to speak, all-year delights for all-year tourists. There is pleasure in visiting this state any season of the year.

Europe can not hope to borrow much money in America so long as it goes on borrowing war-like trouble.

Patriotism is a state of mind, heart and being. It is not momentary effervescence, recurring on Flag Day and Fourth of July. It is a constant and unchanging passion.

HINDENBURG STATUE IS NOW FIREWOOD

BERLIN, June 20. — Germany's iron Hindenburg, which during the war was to epitomize the German spirit, has gone the way of the rest of wartime German things.

An advertisement in the Berlin papers announces the demise simply: "IRON HINDENBURG

"For sale, in whole or in parts, for firewood. Apply, Rudolf Mosse, Berlin W. 8, Leipziger street, 103."

The gigantic statue—a wooden Hindenburg—was erected during the war at the end of Berlin's Avenue of Victory.

It was to be covered with nails, driven one by one by patriotic Germans, who, for the privilege of putting a bit more iron into the field, were to pay a small contribution to German war charities.

The idea flattered. Long before the war ended what was at first a popular pilgrimage had tried Berliners, and the statue remained its woodwork rotting in huge uncovered patches and its scattered wash of nails rusting.

About a year ago, the statue, always an eyesore, was removed. No one was sufficiently interested to ask about it. Its fate was not known until Herr Mosse inserted his ad.

Radicalism In This County

Those who see the roots of revolutionary radicalism in the old world will find cause for second thought in the report of the Lusk Committee of the New York legislature. The modern radical movement began with Karl Marx and the Communist Manifesto of 1848, since which revolutionary radicalism has been more or less evident in Europe.

But the Lusk report, in four large volumes of more than a thousand pages each, calls upon Americans to look to their own country for some roots of radicalism. It presents an amazing review of revolutionary efforts that have been cradled here. No doubt, these are a by-product of the growth of machine production and large cities. But to charge the changing industrial order with the whole responsibility for revolutionary radicalism is to go astray.

The Lusk report finds two great causes for the movement. The first is economic and the second is moral. The infection of radicalism has spread from the ranks of labor to churches and universities, because our acquisitive society has left the intellectuals sadly underpaid. Except for teachers and clergymen of the highest rank, salaries have been allowed to drop far below industrial wages. The result has been to spread discontent and bitterness. More reward and honor given where they are due are necessary to maintain balance and good feeling.

Besides, this economic factor, the lack of religious and moral training has furnished seed-ground for revolutionary radicalism. When high moral standards fall into abeyance, instincts of acquisition, ruthless consumption and display are quick to take their place. This country has in the past generation enjoyed marvelous material prosperity, but without a corresponding quickening of moral responsibility and good citizenship.

American instincts are still sound, but there has been, on the part of many, a loss of perspective and balance. The Lusk report presents a picture whose moral is evident. Revolutionary radicalism does not spring up without reason or cause. It is the result of certain conditions. These are not irremediable.

An economic adjustment and the revival of the moral element in American life will do much to check the spread of red radicalism. Because the normal way out has seemed unduly slow, many have resorted to a quick and dangerous philosophy of escape.

at conferences there. Mr. Luce said that, in addition to the recent reductions proposed on freight, export and import, in transcontinental rates to meet water competition on vegetables, melons, cantaloupes and apples, the Southern Pacific company has made more than 600 tariff adjustments and reduced local freight rates from and to individual points voluntarily and at the request of patrons.

"As evidenced by the new reductions appearing in our freight tariffs, which are filed for public inspection," said Mr. Luce, "it will be seen by the frequent changes appearing therein that the Southern Pacific company is making every effort to adjust its rates from day to day to meet the ever-changing conditions, whether they result from the increase in freight rates which took place on August 26, or from new commercial situations warranting some modification in the existing freight rates.

"The reference to tariff adjustments in our local rates does not take into account the large number of reductions made in freight rates published jointly with other lines in western territory by the Pacific freight traffic bureau, nor does it include transcontinental rate reductions to which the Southern Pacific company is a party. The joint rates and transcontinental rates which have been reduced since August 26, 1929, total into the thousands.

"It will involve considerable labor to form an estimate of the actual number of rate reductions which have taken place since August 26, but to cite an example and to show the significance of just one of the 600 tariff adjustments referred to before, I would like to point out the rate from certain Oregon mills to destination in California, Nevada, and Utah, which involved the establishment of 6280 lower rates to 1570 stations. This tariff became effective in May of this year."

INSECTS MAKE LEAVES 'WALK'

Queer Creatures Responsible for Odd Belief That Has Long Been Held in Australia.

There are some strange leaves in Australia which the people used to think could walk alone. Whenever there came a gust of wind these queer leaves blew off in a perfect shower. As leaves generally do, they turned over and over, and rested upon the ground. Then they would seem to crawl toward the trunk of the tree from which they fell. Since that time it has been found that these leaves, as they were thought to be, were real insects and lived upon those very trees. Their bodies are thin and flat and their wings veined, just like a leaf. If they are disturbed their legs, which are folded away under their bodies, leave their whole shape exactly like the leaf of a tree, with stem and all. Bright green in the summer, these singular little insects, chameleon-like, slowly change their color to a dingy brown, just like a leaf that has been frosted. It is strange that, with wings, they do not fly, but rather walk or crawl along the ground.

Queen Liked Her Ale Strong.

The City of London Brewery company, whose premises are offered for sale, claim to be the only brewery in the city of London existing from the time of Queen Elizabeth, and it is quite possible that the queen occasionally sampled their brew. Elizabeth was a specialist in ale. She liked it strong, as witness the plaintive note her host, the earl of Leicester, sent to Lord Burleigh: "There is not one drop of good drink for her here. We were fain to send to London and Kenilworth and divers other places where ale was; her own beer was so strong that there was no man able to drink it."

Testing Material in Cloth.

Mixtures of cotton and wool may be tested by raveling a bit of cloth and burning two of the three ends, one running with the selvage and the other crosswise to it. The cotton thread burns quickly with a flame and smells like wood; wool burns slowly without a flame and smells like burning hair, often used to test manufactured wool. This can be detected by raveling out a bit of the material, when short broken fibers may be seen. In general, a woolen material which has cotton in it will become more wrinkled when wet than all-wool goods.

Ancient Zoological Gardens.

Records show that King Nezahualcoyotl had zoological gardens in Tezcuco, Mexico, in the middle of the Fifteenth century, and in the next century Cortez found aviaries and fish ponds at Iztapalapan. Montezuma II, emperor of Mexico in the beginning of the Sixteenth century, had large collections of animals in the gardens of his capital.

Almost all of the modern zoological gardens date from comparatively recent years, and contain large collections of fine animals, more suitably housed than at any time in the history of the world.
