By making a special effort that day, together with attractive bargains, the merchants should do a big business.

NEEDS TOO MUCH EXERTION Writer Refuses to Go Too Deeply Into What Might Be Called "I and Me" Problem. The line, "Look what I done for you and him and me," is good American, but better American, I believe, would be, "Look what I done for him and you and I." This, however, writes Ring Lardner in the Bookman, brings up a subject to which one ought to be able to devote a whole volume, but one ain't goin' to. One is only goin' to state that mysterious rules govern the cases of personal pronouns in our language and one hasn't had time to solve the mysteries even since prohibition.

We say, "He come up to me in the club," but we also say, "He come up to Charley and I in the club," or even "He come up to I and Charley in the club." Charley's presence in the club seems, for "some reason or another," to alter my case. The other night I was reading a play script by one of this country's foremost dramatists; and recurring in it was the stage direction, "A look passes between he and So-and-So." But this playwright wouldn't think of saying or writing, "She passed he a look."

My theory on this particular point is that when the common American citizen, whom we will call Joe, was in his last year in school (the sixth grade), the teacher asked him how many boys there were in his family. He replied: "Just Frank and me." "Just Frank and I," corrected the teacher. And the correction got Joe hauled up.

NO CHANCE FOR COLLECTORS Steins Now Valuable Only as Mementoes Are Kept Securely Chained to the Wall. Beer steins, wine glasses and bar towels are rapidly joining the dust-covered and mildewed relics of the days that preceded January 16, 1920, when the prohibition law went into effect.

As the saloons become scarcer, bar-room paraphernalia, from a relic collector's viewpoint, become more valuable. One restaurant in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn is taking no chances on losing its mementoes of the past days. The stained glass windows of the old saloon remain, but the bar has been removed to make way for the tables of the new restaurant. In the redecorated establishment a shelf runs entirely around the room. All along the shelf are exquisite old German beer steins, relics of former days and more valuable now as mementoes. Passing through the handle of each stein is a chain, which is nailed to the wall. Unscrupulous souvenir hunters, waiting until the waiter's back is turned, find their designs foiled. What the old bar has left of the old regime it purposes to keep.—New York Sun.

Sleepy Sickness. Sleepy sickness is quite a different disease from the somewhat similarly named, but far more deadly, sleeping sickness, which is a tropical disease. Sleepy sickness was first noticed in England in 1918. There is little doubt that the cause of this mysterious complaint is a microbe. The microbes concentrate their attack on the brain, causing lethargy and facial paralysis, the patient lying for days in bed with motionless head and expressionless face, like a mask, reminding one of the effigy on a tomb. Doctors are not yet definitely agreed as to whether the hiccup epidemic and the sleepy sickness are different diseases, or whether the one is merely a symptom of the other. Probably the latter view is the correct one, seeing that violent and prolonged hiccups were noticed in connection with the outbreak of sleepy sickness that ravaged Vienna in the early part of last year.

French Children Make Toys. One of the most interesting toy manufacturers of France is not a factory at all, but a communal school in Paris, directed by an amateur designer, who during the war interested the children in the making of toys after his own designs, which were so original that there was an immediate demand for them. Furthermore, the children who were making the toys became so much interested in the work that a large sum was realized, part of which was turned into the treasury of the institution, but a part was spent in giving the workers some diversion. The business is to be continued on a larger scale than ever before.

(Continued From page one) killed three of my brothers in the war. But, the situation here is simply driving me into their arms. Still another told me, "The Germans will do whatever we want them to. They have shown good restraint and discipline on the whole and have surely striven to meet our wishes and orders." And, when one talks with Germans he learns that they have the greatest affection for the English soldier.

It's somewhat picturesque to see a "Jock"—one of the Black Watch soldiers—fraternizing with a German "Apo" or plebsite policeman—over a glass of beer. But it happens. And, it's another picture to see on the road from here to Stuebendorf a stolid German and his frau giving a few Jocks a "lift" on their ancient haywagon. And, yet again, it's a picture to see a Britisher trying to teach a German the intricacies of soccer football. Or to see children and women showering the highlanders with flowers on their way through Oppeln.

It is, indeed, a long cry from "Gott strafe England" to "Gott sei dank" for English troops, come to rescue Germans.
