 Advertising for fraternal orders or societies charging a regular initiation fee and dues, no discount. Religious and benevolent orders will be charged the regular rate for all advertising when an admission or other charge is made.

What Constitutes Advertising!
 In order to allay a misunderstanding among some as to what constitutes news and what advertising, we print this very simple rule which is used by newspapers to differentiate between them: "ALL future events, where an admission charge is made or a collection is taken IS ADVERTISING." This applies to organizations and societies of every kind as well as to individuals.

All reports of such activities after they have occurred is news.
 All coming social or organization meetings of societies where no money contribution is solicited, initiation charged, or collection taken is NEWS.

Owlsh Citbits
 By KENNETH SULLIVAN

A polar bear killed by members of a recent Amundsen exploring expedition was found upon examination to contain a Norwegian newspaper in its stomach. There is no doubt but that the newspaper publishers keenly regret the passing of an old and prominent subscriber. If the news was garbled, Bruin did it.

A dispatch from New York chronicles the "reign of terror" caused by a few small boys and a dancing skeleton parading the streets, entering cafes, frightening bull dogs, strong men and children alike. It may be presumed that every one of the terrorized citizens thought that the family skeleton had picked the closet lock. Lil' ol' Noo Yawk is having a strenuous time these summer dog days.

Ashland has a shady auto camp ground, as tourists testify, but it is all open and above board.

Klamath Falls business men at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday noon sounded the keynote of co-operation among Southern Oregon cities. The spirit is commendable. Southern Oregon has not reached the apex, the final end of development. No matter how much has been accomplished it is only starting, gauging its progress by the future. Southern Oregon has a great deal to live for. Southern Oregon boosters is not an idle term.

Some place in the moonshine districts of Tennessee workmen have unearthed a petrified giant six feet four inches, north to south, wearing a chain about the neck and two four-inch horns on its head. It is conceded that the giant was buried before national prohibition—and yet, the modern "hooch" is remarkable.

Jazz togs have passed. Chicago haberdashers have decreed that rainbow silk shirts, socks with an optical kick and long-priced, eye-blinding cravats have gone into the obsolete past with nothing but slashed prices on old stocks to mark their passing. The shirts may be made into handkerchiefs and the socks given to the suffering—let us say foreigners—but think of the

Sudden Death of Ashland Pioneer Is Sudden Shock

The funeral of Mrs. F. W. Chapin, who passed away Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at her residence, at 150 First street, was held from the Dodge Undertaking Parlors at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Mrs. Chapin's death came very suddenly after only a few days illness. Mrs. Chapin was the last of the pioneer family of Hannah Anderson, who crossed the plains by ox team bringing her family from Iowa in the early '50's.

Nancy Anderson was born in Clay City, Ind., Sept. 5th, 1840, and in 1867 was married on the old Anderson homestead near what is now Talent, to F. W. Chapin, a pioneer teacher of Northern California.

The greater part of their married life was spent in that state, they having moved to Ashland from Sacramento about 8 years ago. Her husband preceded her to his last resting place a little more than a year ago. She was a sister of the late E. K. Anderson and Mary E. McCall.

Gold Hill Mines To Reopen Under New Organization

GOLD HILL, Or., Aug. 13.—The National Manganese Ore company, an Indianapolis, Ind., incorporation with headquarters at Gold Hill, Or., has been organized to reopen and operate the Centennial placer mines, three miles south of Gold Hill.

The new owners have received a large shipment of equipment and are erecting a large capacity drag line type dredge driven by electric power on these diggings, which will operate throughout the entire year.

This mine has been idle since 1906 and was last operated by the recent owners, the Electric Dredge company, an Indianapolis, Ind., concern, but during the early days of the war the extensive electric equipment was dismantled and shipped from Gold Hill to the war industry centers. As an early-day placer diggings, this property produced great wealth in virgin gold in the shallow grounds which were exhausted, and the present ground, which is just as rich, consists of banks from 20 to 40 feet in depth of heavy clay and sediments to bedrock.

Puzzled Expert.
 As two friends were conversing an old college professor passed them in the street.

"The professor is a wonderful man," one of them remarked. "He's a great mathematician and boasts that he can figure out any problem."

"Not any more," returned his friend. "The landlord boosted his rent and has him sitting up nights trying to solve the housing problem."—Toledo Blade.

Norling Mine Gold Ore Makes Rich Showing

Two single showings of ore from the old Norling mine group, situated about four miles west of Jacksonville, brought an assay of $339.86 in gold and silver, according to certified assay reports on one and $221.90 in gold and silver in another.

The reports were received from the assay office yesterday by P. X. Johnson, manager of the company, who immediately began speeding plans for the opening up of other veins and the erection of buildings.

According to Manager Johnson the company will begin making general shipments of ore within a short period. The finds were made within three feet of grass roots.

MUSEUM GETS RARE RUGS

Once Used to Wrap Around Pillars in the Orient, They Are Now in Philadelphia.

Six Mongol pillar rugs, recently purchased by the Pennsylvania museum, have been hung in the Memorial hall, Fairmount park, in the north corridor; one pair at the entrance to the Wilstach gallery, one pair at the entrance to the Silver room and the third pair at the entrance of the section devoted to musical instruments. These rugs were once bound about the wooden pillars of Mongol lamaseries or temples, and in several of the museum examples the woolen washings which bound them are still there. Possibly textile decoration for pillars followed carving, which would account for persistence of design, as these rugs could have been intended for no other purpose. In one pair, at least, the design becomes meaningless when spread flat, for the dragons which coil about the pillar appear cut off in three separate pieces, which meet exactly when the edges are joined.

The Chinese Huen Tsang, traveling to India in the first half of the Seventh century, says that the pavilions of the monastery of Nelanda were upborne by pillars ornamented with dragons. The burial chambers of the kings, with their antechambers, have been uncovered from the mounds of earth which were heaped about them, and on the stone walls are fresco paintings. The doorway from the outer to the inner chamber of one of these royal tombs is flanked on either side by an octagonal column on which are painted coiled dragons, no doubt in reminiscence of earlier carved uprights. The next step, for particularly nomad people, was to render the same design for a similar purpose in textile fabric to be lashed to the post.—Philadelphia Record.

"In the past, on lumber and forest products destined to territory east of the Mississippi river in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Arkansas, Wisconsin, Ohio, Ontario, New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, routing has been restricted to the Portland gateway.

"Effective September 10, 1921, we have arranged to publish the same rates via the Roseville-Ogden gateway. This will give the shippers two routes instead of one, which they have heretofore enjoyed."

BAND CONCERT ATTRACTION FOR MANY TOURISTS

The value of the Ashland band as an advertising asset to the city when the concert given in Lithia park Wednesday evening acted as the introductory event that brought Ashland residents and auto tourists stopping at the camp ground together in mutual friendship.

The concert, given under the direction of L. L. Leedom, was the first to be given this year and is expected to be a weekly affair. All numbers of the program were well played and enjoyed by a large audience. It was said by several who attended the concert that weekly programs will serve as an entertainment feature for tourists camped at the park, adding one more point in the city's favor as a tourist center and summer camper's playground. Another concert will be given next Wednesday night.
