State Prosecutes Case All of the charges filed to date have been on state charges and U. S. Commissioner Roy Davis has no knowledge of any federal charges being filed. Up to last night District Attorney Rawles Moore had not been officially advised on the raids and the arrests, but S. B. Sandifer, special agent, with a commission from the governor, informed Justice Taylor that a special prosecutor would be assigned to handle the case.

Many Suspects Flee A number of men have departed for parts unknown since the arrests started and warrants have been issued for their arrest. This list includes some more or less well-known citizens. Rumors in circulation setting forth that warrants had been issued for officials, past and present, are not founded on fact but simply the usual gossip that arises whenever factional lines become drawn.

Joy Ride to Lake It has been definitely established that five operatives, in charge of Special Agent Sandifer, arrived about two weeks ago. One of the sleuths immediately made his roll of bills conspicuous and arranged for a joyride to Prospect and Crater Lake.

The arrests caused a flurry of excitement among the home brewers, but their fears are ungrounded as the raiders are only after the wholesalers, not the retailers. Besides they are protected by the search and seizure clause of the Volstead act, which prohibits the invasion of the home for liquor without a search warrant.

Thought hardly feasible for Oregon to make such charges while all the other western states were admitting resident and non-resident students on the same basis. Now that Washington and California and other western state colleges and universities have changed to the tuition basis for non-resident students, the regents' committee found it practicable to make the change at the Oregon institutions.

Twenty Lower Than Oregon Twenty of these reported and the average tuition charged by them is $54.20—just $5.80 less than Oregon charges. Iowa State college charges $51 a year, Ohio $50, Michigan Agricultural college $90 and state university and agricultural college of Kansas $15.

The fee is expected to prevent an undue influx of non-resident students, and the proceeds will be helpful in constructing new buildings and defraying other necessary expenses. Already the heavy increase in enrollment at the two institutions has caused a serious shortage of room.
