SUNFLOWERS USED FOR SILAGE

The use of sunflowers for silage has proved popular in certain of the northern great plains and intermountain states where it is not possible to produce a large tonnage of corn for silage purposes. In some sections the silage made from sunflowers has been found to compare favorably in palatability and feeding value with silage made from corn. This is not always the case, however, as it appears that in certain ir-

Don't Expose Your Property to Loss

If you were carrying $5,000 or more of cash in your car you'd want to have it insured. But are you not driving your car, with about all of your property exposed? If you injure a man, and he obtains a damage verdict against you, you've got to pay it. If you haven't the cash, your property can be sold to get it. Don't risk your house, your bank account, your business. Let a first class automobile policy stand between your worldly goods and the result of that possible accident. DO IT NOW. A few dollars today may save you a few thousand tonight.

rigated sections in the northern great plains, where the growth of sunflowers is rank and succulent, the resulting silage is often not very palatable. Experiments reported from the Huntley experiment farm in Montana of the United States department of agriculture, show that while it is possible to produce from 25 to 30 tons of sunflowers per acre, it has been difficult to produce a silage that is as much relished by livestock as corn silage, which gives rather less than half as much tonnage per acre.
