DANCER TELLS OF CARUSO'S DEATH FIGHT

NOTED DANCER, WHO ATTENDED FUNERAL, TELLS OF LAST HOURS OF WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS SINGER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—"Caruso did not want to die. He believed it was the Supreme Will that he should continue to sing. He was broken-hearted and cried like a child when he became aware death was at hand."

This was the information brought by Rosina Galli, premiere dancer of the Metropolitan Opera company, who has just arrived from Italy. Mme. Galli joined Mrs. Caruso immediately after the death of the tenor, and remained with her and the baby, Gloria, until after the funeral. Mme. Galli continued: "Caruso wanted so much to get well. On his deathbed he called to his wife: 'Don't you think I will recover?' He was quiet then and did not know he was going to die. A little later he felt terrible pains in his chest. He must have suffered awful agony."

"Again he called to Mrs. Caruso in an agonizing voice. 'I am going to die.' She tried to comfort him, saying the pain would soon pass and that he would be better. But it was of no use. His eyes closed, his moaning ceased. He was dead."

"The world has lost a voice that will never be replaced, and a man of splendid character."

"Mrs. Caruso told me she will return to America as soon as her affairs have been adjusted."

"Mrs. Caruso finds it hard to convince herself that Enrico is dead. She told me she expects him to walk in and greet her at any moment. And every time Enrico's brother, Giovanni, comes before her view, her heart almost stops beating. She said to me: 'Whenever I see Giovanni I think it is my Enrico. It is agony for me. I cannot realize he is gone.'"

"Only a few days before his death he was singing. He sang 'Marta,' all the way through and asked everybody, 'How is my voice?' Everybody thought it was wonderful, better than ever. Caruso was confident of that. That was his mistake. He did not pay attention to his lungs, which had become affected. He had not the power there."

Volume Lacking
"The voice retained the old richness of tone, but he did not breathe as well, and the volume was lacking. He had lost more than he realized or cared to admit, even to himself. I doubt if he would ever have been the same great Caruso had he lived."

"When the abscess began bothering him he made light of it, and Mrs. Caruso did not send for a physician. She was a stranger in Naples and did not know. Someone else should have stepped in and taken the great tenor in hand. Doctors were called finally, but it was too late."

"The Naples physicians would not risk operating on such a man under such circumstances. The abscess had made too much progress. The recommended sending to Rome for celebrated surgeons."

"More over Caruso was opposed to an operation. Indeed, he did not want the doctors around. He said to them: 'Tell me what I have, what the trouble is.' They never did so, but kept him in ignorance of the real condition of his lungs."

"Caruso will be buried like other illustrious Italians. They are now seeking the place. There will be a suitable tomb or monument."

Borah Refuses to Supersede Lodge in Party Leadership

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30.—Senator Borah has declined President Harding's invitation to become one of the administration leaders in the senate. Harding desired that Borah assume the role of assistant to Senator Lodge, without meaning any reflection on Lodge. Borah is recognized as the most influential of the progressive and independent senators. The president desired that he take the leadership in an effort to harmonize the forces within the republican party.

RUSSIAN FLEET TO BLAZE TRADE ROUTE IN ARCTIC

By LLOYD ALLEN
LONDON, Aug. 30.—Under command of the veteran polar navigator, Captain Otto Sverdrup, a $5,000,000 flotilla of specially equipped ships is ready to start from England, Germany and Sweden into the dangerous all-but-uncharted water of the Arctic ocean, carrying cargoes of essential commodities for the people of far-away Siberia.

This expedition is being sponsored by the All-Russian Co-operative society of London, better known as Arcos, the purchasing organization of the Russia soviet government.

George Solomon, a director of Arcos, in an exclusive interview with the United Press, frankly explained that the hazardous undertaking is an experiment—it may not succeed.

Though every known precaution is being taken in order that the mysterious northern route into Greater Russia may be opened to commerce of the west.

The ships are carrying a thousand and one different articles of everyday trade in America and Europe. But when the stuff is unloaded in the ice-clogged deltas of the Obi and Yenesei rivers—far above the Arctic circle—every article will virtually be worth its weight in gold, because the people of Siberia have been cut off from the western world for a long time and are in urgent need of supplies of tools, household implements, agricultural machines, and so forth.

Returning the ships will bring out valuable Siberian furs, that are now being shipped to the Obi and Yenesei deltas by agents of the soviet government at Moscow.

"From the time the boats start, we shall be in daily touch with every one of them by wireless," said Solomon.

"Three boats will leave Liverpool in August. Simultaneously, another ship departs from Gothenburg and two more from Hamburg."

"They will rendezvous at Murmansk, where we intend to obtain an ice breaker ship, which would be invaluable should the flotilla encounter frozen seas."

"Approximately 1000 workers are now on their way to unload the boats. As a special inducement to these men, we are sending on the ships some American preserves, also numerous household articles, such as needles, thread, also sugar and tea."

"The boats should get back to western Europe in two and a half to three months time. But they are prepared to remain six months if necessary."

Outward bound, the flotilla will carry 13,060 tons of railroad material, enamelled kitchenware, agricultural machinery, axes, padlocks; in fact, a rather general line of hardware.

Included in the list are 3000 sporting rifles and accompanying ammunition for the fur hunters of Siberia.

Harding Refuses Conference Of Miners and Operators

SPECIAL SESSION OF GRAND JURY NEXT THURSDAY

A special session of the grand jury has been called for next Thursday and it is said they will consider the cases of James (Shine) Edwards and John Goodwin, taxicab drivers, and Wilbur (Wig) Jacks, of Eagle Point, bound over by Justice of the Peace Glenn O. Taylor last week, on the charge of selling intoxicating liquor. This action will insure the trio a speedy trial, and before the October term of the circuit court. It is also said some loose ends of the Bank of Jacksonville failure will be probed.

James Rock and Isaac Coffman, Applegate farmers, and Bernard Dufur, of the Kane's Creek district, sentenced to terms in the county jail for possession of stills and illicit liquors, are working on county work, at an allowance of a dollar a day, the same being turned over to their families. The prisoners all pled in open court that their incarceration would work a hardship on their families.

There has been no new developments in the bootlegging situation, except that a hunt is being made for a couple of well-known men about town who have been conspicuous by their absence since the serving of the first warrant.

Special Agent Sandifer and aides left for the north last Friday, and it is rumored that a new set of investigators took their places. Upon arrival at Roseburg, Sandifer gave out a statement that "thousands of dollars" had been collected in Jackson county. This is news to the local authorities. Fines were imposed but none paid.

GENERALLY FAIR

Five of every 100 men in Europe are in the army.

Haz Kik

If I should go to a man's place of business, early in the morning, before he came down, and leave word that I would be back to see him, and then, later, came back with a big, open knife in my hand, in a threatening manner, and began to vilify and threaten him, I would not bawl like a calf and run like a deer and go off and try to have him arrested, if he tried to knock the knife out of my hand.

I wouldn't go out looking for trouble unless I could trust my legs and physical courage to stand and fight it out.

HAZ KIK.

OLD MINES AT GOLD HILL ARE AGAIN OPERATING

GOLD HILL, Or., Aug. 30.—Considerable importance has been attached to the Corporal G group of gold mines since the Lucky Bart and Blossom groups have been taken over by the O. L. Willoughby association of Alaskan miners. The Corporal G group is contiguous to and situated between these two groups of mines. It is owned and operated by Dr. W. P. Chisholm of Gold Hill, and Dr. C. N. Smith, formerly a Gold Hill resident, who is now living at Forest Grove. The work now in progress is a drift 250 feet in length under the old works.

The Corporal G was uncovered accidentally in 1904 by Joseph R. McKay, who had had years of experience in this region prospecting for gold deposits. While hunting deer he halted near the summit of the mountain. Casually kicking the pine needles on the ground, he uncovered specimens of quartz heavily laden with gold. In a few weeks he mined $29,000 on the spot in shallow diggings on three small parallel veins. Alarmed at the pinching of the pay shoot at a shallow depth, he sold the diggings to Nina M. Smith, now dead, the mother of the doctor, for $10,000.

The Smiths recovered a good many thousand dollars from the mine, but spent it in further development. The mine had been idle for a number of years until Dr. Chisholm, an experienced operator in the gold, copper and quicksilver mines in this region, recently acquired an interest in the property and reopened it.

The mine is six miles out of Gold Hill on the left fork of Sardine creek, at an elevation of 2600 feet in a heavily timbered and well watered area. The old works consist of three drifts on three parallel veins striking east and west, known as the north, south and middle vein. The present work is drifting on the north vein with an average width of five feet, with a dip of 65 degrees north. The country rock is a macaceous slaty quartzite cut by andesite and spessartite. The ore contains porphyry and quartz, with some calcite, pyrite, pyrrhotite and a little chalcopyrite, bornite, sphalerite, galena and rare free gold. This dip is started on a hillside with a 45-degree pitch which will lead 250 feet below the old works.
