RESIGNATIONS IN CABINET PROSPECT NEXT 6 MONTHS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3.—The first six months of the Harding administration having gone by without the occurrence of anything startling, the teatable and cloakroom gossip of the national capital are predicting some radical changes in the makeup of official Washington for the next six.

It is the gossip of Washington that before the new administration celebrates its first anniversary there will be at least two, maybe three and possibly more, cabinet changes. The rumors have recently become so circumstantial that they have found their way into some metropolitan papers and have resulted in the expected denials. The reports, however, persist.

The names chiefly concerned in these rumored changes are Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty.

According to the stories that circulate among the teatables of Washington, Secretary Mellon has tired of public life after his brief first taste of it, and is desirous of getting back to the placid serenity of directing a score of big corporations and banks with which he is connected.

This is Secretary Mellon's first taste of public life and political contact and it is admitted by his few intimates that he has found it little to his liking. Being naturally of a shy and retiring disposition, the secretary of the treasury is said to have formed a pronounced dislike to the rough give-and-take of Washington political life, and it would not surprise his intimates should he embrace the first opportunity to get back into private life.

Mellon Disheartened Secretary Mellon has found rough sledding in Washington with his tax program, and this is said to have increased his dislike for his job. One of his first official acts was the presentation to congress of an estimate of how much money it would take to run the federal government for the next fiscal year, based on the amount of expenditures which he saw would be necessary in the existing state of things.

Congress, with an eye to re-election next year and realizing the potency of an economy argument with the average voter, slashed his estimates unmercifully. President Harding was called in as a mediator in the resultant dispute and, realizing the party's need, the chief executive supported the congressional side, with the result that Mellon's figures were discarded.

Many of the secretary's tax recommendations suffered the same fate at the hands of house republicans in charge of framing the new revenue bill. The republicans of the senate finance committee likewise disregarded and cast aside a number of his recommendations.

The net result of these experiences is said to have increased the secretary's dislike for a post which he was reluctant to accept in the first place.

Weeks Wants Mellon's Post If Mellon does resign, it is generally believed in Washington that Secretary of War John W. Weeks will be shifted over to the treasury department, where he has long desired to be. It is understood that Weeks accepts the war portfolio with the understanding that he would be given the treasury berth at the first opportunity.

The case of Attorney General Daugherty is not like that of Mellon. The attorney general has been the grand master personage since March 4 last, and the demands made upon him have been tremendous.

Aspirants for every kind of a federal job—from watchman to ambassador—have had to "see Daugherty," and as all have not been taken care of, it has led to some hard feelings in many quarters.

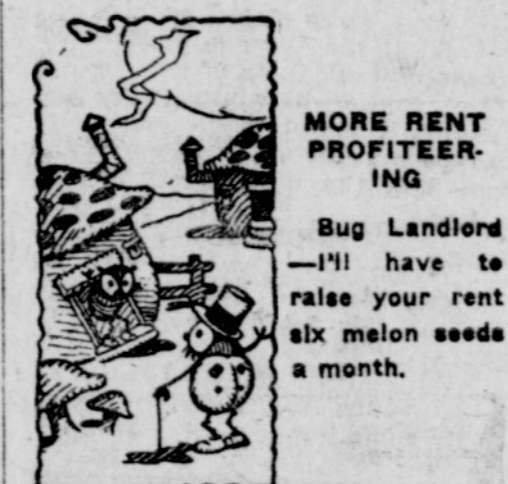

Personal reasons also are said to figure largely in the attorney general's reported desire to retire from his post. His own health is none too good, and Mrs. Daugherty is an invalid, necessitating his spending much time traveling back and forth between Washington and Ohio.

No confirmation of the rumors regarding either Mellon or Daugherty is obtainable, but the gossiping persists around the capital.

Should Daugherty leave the cabinet, the belief prevails that President Harding would name as his successor either former Senator George Sutherland, of Utah, or James M. Beck, of New York, at present solicitor general in the department.

That's Different. Fond Mama: No, Johnny, you can't play with those naughty boys next door. Johnnie: How'd you know their mother forbid me to play with 'em?'

Just Wait Mrs. Gossip is very quiet. She's in a train of thought. Are trains of that kind dangerous? I should say so. Just wait and see how many people are run down.

Good Memory Mr. Jones—So you remember me? I wonder if your sister will, also? Bobby—Sure. She said she'd never forget a feller what was as stingy as you.

Gem Was Natural Thermometer. It was a wonderful sapphire, so it is said, that led the celebrated Doctor Sorby to the discovery of the nature of the liquid sometimes found inclosed in the cavities of crystals. The gem in question contained a tube-shaped cavity a quarter of an inch long and an eighteenth of an inch in diameter, which was so regular in its bore that it served, by means of the liquid partially filling it, for a thermometer. The contained liquid half-filled the bore at 50 degrees Fahrenheit, and completely filled it at 80 degrees. A study of the rate of expansion of the liquid led to the conclusion that it must be carbonic acid.

Arabia. Arabia is a peninsula in the southwest of the Asiatic continent, forming the connecting link between Asia and Africa, lying between the Persian gulf and the Gulf of Oman on the east and the Red sea on the west, the two continents being united at the Isthmus of Suez. Arabia is divided into many kingdoms and principalities, each of which has its own capital, as follows: The kingdom of Hejaz, with Mecca as its capital; the emirate of Nejd and Hasa, with Riyadh as capital; the principality of Kowit, with Kowit as capital; the sultanate of Oman, with Muscat as capital; the emirate of Jabel Shammer, with Hall as capital; the emirate of Asir, with Eborah as capital, and the Imamate of Yemen, with Sarla as capital.

Mayor Gates, of Medford, is still going strong. Last night he presented a new carnation called the Ben Olcott to Governor Olcott and his party with an appropriate speech, which could be heard throughout the fair grounds. Saturday, as representative of the fair board, he gave the main speech at the dedication of the new G. A. R. building at the fair grounds, before a large audience and he was given a most enthusiastic reception.

$2.50 and maintain the bureau— whereas, the same addicts today are in out in the city, stealing, committing burglary and sometimes murder to secure the money that the drug runner demands of them. "Such a bureau will virtually put the illegal drug seller out of business—something that arrest and prosecution have not succeeded in doing. Finally, with such a bureau it will be possible to help the addict escape from the bondage of the drug by co-operating in diminishing his doses and gradually liberating him or her from the habit."
