Manager Explains Purpose of Pacific International Show

By O. M. PLUMMER

"Why attend the Pacific International?" This question was asked O. M. Plummer, International Livestock exposition, which will be held in Portland November 5-12.

"The real merchant finds it helps him to go to merchants' conventions," said Mr. Plummer in reply. "A lawyer attends meetings of his bar association; a doctor goes to clinics and medical association gatherings.

"The farmer, the dairyman and livestock man needs all the Pacific International has for him. There are the animals of the breed in which he is interested, the greatest producers, the most perfect types and the best conformation. He studies what others—most successful in this work—have accomplished. He sees what they have done and how they have done it. He may arrange to buy the very sire he needs to bring him the generation he has sought. He may find just the heifer, or gilt, or ewe that he wants to bring achievement to him. He learns the feeding ration of fat stock and studies its practicality and economy.

"But one of the chief functions of this greatest of all livestock shows is the inspiration it gives. The visitor may know how many Shorthorns or Herefords there are, but until he sees the pick of a thousand herds striving for honors in the judging ring, he cannot realize how vital is the industry which he helps to represent.

"He meets old friends and makes new ones—men and women engaged in the same work as he, who have the same problems and perhaps have solved some of them.

"A great show—the greatest collection of pure-bred livestock in the world—a great throng of earnest, intelligent people who have produced them; authorities on all breeds; keen, eager beginners—all there to learn and help each other—that is the source of inspiration of Pacific International.

"Men and women who attend the Pacific International Livestock exposition year after year are bound to be more successful than those who stay at home. They will be more efficient. The cost of a journey does not matter if the journey is profitable. The trip to the Pacific International will be profitable."
