Large Tract Of Pulp Timber Is Open In Alaska

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 27.—The largest area of forest pulp timber ever offered for sale has been thrown open to bidders by the United States forest service. The timber is located in the Tongass national forest of Alaska and comprises 150,000 acres along the west coast of Admiralty Island.

According to government figures the timber will cut 350,000,000 cubic feet. It is composed chiefly of Sitka spruce and western hemlock. There is also a small amount of Alaska cedar. Both Sitka spruce and western hemlock make good grades of pulp, as has been demonstrated by the mills of British Columbia, Washington and Oregon. The timber is twenty-four miles from Juneau at its nearest point, 900 miles from Seattle, and 335 miles from Prince Rupert, the western terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad.

Only stumps will be sold, title to the land being retained by the government. No bid of less than 60 cents on every 100 cubic feet of spruce, nor less than 30 cents on every 100 cubic feet of hemlock will be accepted by the government. The bid stumps prices will apply until April 1, 1928. Timber will be paid for in advance installments of from $10,000 to $20,000 each as cutting proceeds.

The sale period extends until March 30, 1923. The purchaser is allowed until April 1, 1923, to begin cutting and a pulp mill must be established in Alaska not later than April 1, 1924.
