Dr. Farrand Becomes President of Cornell

Here are four eminent Americans, gathered at Ithaca the other day for the inauguration of Dr. Livingston Farrand as president of Cornell university and the laying of the corner stone of a new million and a half dollar chemistry laboratory for which George F. Baker, New York banker, gave the money. Left to right, they are: Charles M. Schwab, trustee of the university; Judge Frank H. Hiscock of the New York court of appeals, chairman of the board of trustees; George F. Baker, and Dr. Livingston Farrand.

WHITE HOUSE FACTS.

Thousands of visitors flock to the White House, so that today it is the best known residence in the world, but comparatively few people know the chief facts about this home of their President.

The White House is so named because it is built of white freestone.

The site was selected by President Washington and Maj. Peter Charles L'Enfant, planner of the capital city, in 1791.

The architect was James Hoban of Dublin. The plans were chosen by competition.

The cornerstone was laid October 13, 1792.

The first occupant was President and Mrs. Adams, in November, 1800.

The White House was burned by the British in 1814.

It was first heated by gas in 1848.

A system of heating and ventilation was installed in 1853.

The original cost of the White House was met out of the proceeds from the sale of lands donated by Maryland and Virginia.

A Jewish girls' club has been organized in Shanghai, China.

Egypt is said to have made a million dollars out of recent cotton deals.

In Sweden the medical profession was opened to women by royal decree in 1870.

Morocco is the largest and most important country in the world that is without a newspaper.

In some parts of China labor is so cheap that there is no coin small enough to pay for a day's work.

During the last century the famous Yalu river of China has changed its course more than a score of times, and now flows into the sea through a mouth 300 miles distant from that of 100 years ago.

The Taj Mahal, at Agra, is said to be the world's most celebrated mausoleum. Built of white marble and inlaid with precious stones, it cost $10,000,000, and 20,000 men, it is estimated, were occupied 20 years in the building of it.

Aviator's Life Has Its Ups and Downs

INDIANAPOLIS.—Carl Stieler, who spent his $45,000 share of the $234,000 Standard Oil company mail robbery at Whiting, Ind., in 1919 in a two-year orgy of airplane and automobile buying and travel, was arraigned in the federal court here. The wife who was with him while he spent the money, and who, when it was gone, took in washing and scrubbed floors to help him, is with him.

"If I hadn't given myself up the police would never have got me," said Stieler, who is twenty-three years old. The police knew that I was mixed up with the robbery, but they never saw me in Chicago. It was the same way when we got to Los Angeles. Even when Bessie and I were married under our own names they didn't get wise. Wherever we went it was always under our right names. Why, I was pinched for speeding once in Los Angeles, and in the courtroom where they fined me my picture, with a reward under it, was hanging on the wall. And they never recognized me."

His interest in flying, he said, was the result of his service as an enlisted man with the Four Hundred and Ninety-eighth aero squadron overseas.

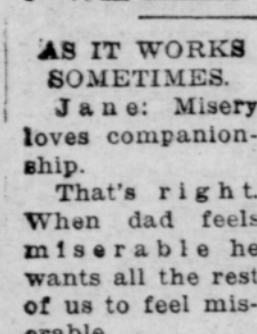

His record of expenses, as kept, he said, against the "time when federal agents might get him," follows: One airplane, $9,600; one airplane, $4,500; one airplane, $5,500; one airplane without motor, $2,000; one airplane motor, $6,250; installing motor, $900; one automobile, $1,700; organizing airplane company, $1,250; jewelry for wife, $200; living and traveling expenses, $13,400.

"The glider with the fine engine I used to carry my wife and myself around Arizona, New Mexico and Texas until the money gave out. It was great sport, but I wish now that the cops had been smarter—that they had caught me at the start. Then I would have two years of my sentence behind me instead of all of it before me."

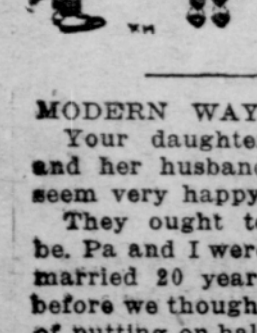

CONNOISSEUR
She: Now that you've looked over my music, what would you like to play?
He: Cards.

AS IT WORKS SOMETIMES.
Jane: Misery loves companionship.
That's right. When dad feels miserable he wants all the rest of us to feel miserable.

YOU KNOW HIM.
His talk is loose and out of joint. You're glad when he gets through; He always seems to make a point Of never coming to it.

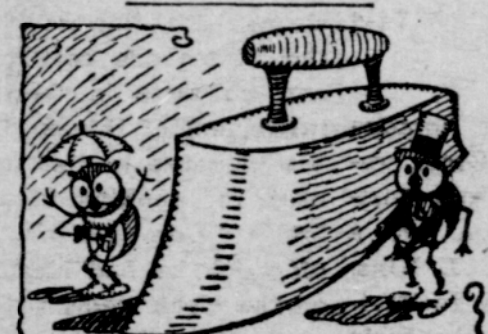

MODERN WAY.
Your daughter and her husband seem very happy. They ought to be. Pa and I were married 20 years before we thought of putting on half the style they're starting out with.

CRAMPED.
This parlor is very cute, but it's so small I'm afraid to gape in it.

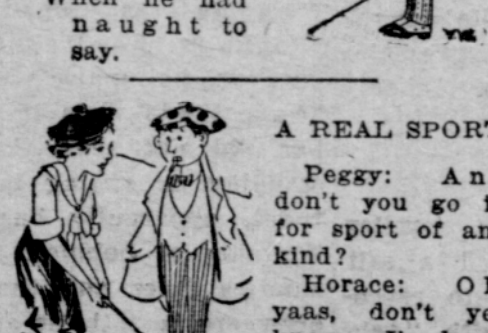

Mother—Why did you strike your little sister?
Young Bobby—Well, we were playing Adam and Eve and instead of tempting me with the apple, she ate it herself.

IMPUDENT.
Miss Bug—There's that disgusting old bug, hanging around this flat iron corner again.

SHE HAD MANY.
Sister is your fiancé coming tonight?
Not exactly, just a fiancé is coming.

THE QUIET MAN.
He is a quiet man and meek. The reason's plain as day; No one has ever heard him speak. When he had aught to say.

A REAL SPORT
Peggy: And don't you go in for sport of any kind?
Horace: Oh, yaas, don't yer know, I'm-haw-passionately fond of dominoes.

NICE NAME.
What's domestic science, hey? That's just a little quirk To keep from scaring girls away Who don't like kitchen work.
