"Save Children of Near East" Pleads Member of Relief Commission

Mrs. Florence Spencer Duryea, Just Returned From a Journey thru the Levant, Says Scores of Children are Dying Daily

MRS. FLORENCE SPENCER DURYEA

THOUSANDS of orphans throughout the Near East who owe their lives to America still look to us for their food and shelter, according to Mrs. Florence Spencer Duryea, Director of the Women's Organizations of the Near East Relief. Mrs. Duryea was a member of the Commission which has just returned to this country after a two months' investigation of conditions in the Levant. "They look to us, for they have no one else to look to," Mrs. Duryea declares. "We have been caring for them during the long years of warfare, which has not yet ceased in the Near East, and we must continue while the present need exists. "Though much of our work has been done and it will require just a little more effort to complete the task, the situation this year makes immediate and effective action necessary. Due to invasion and disturbed political conditions an additional burden has been thrown upon us, especially in Armenia, where there are thousands of little tots facing a dreadful death unless we answer their appeal. "I saw hundreds of children, so thin and weak from under-nourish-

Kinney, Alvin and Dave Cardwell, Florence, May, Mike, Bill and Ed Hanley were schoolmates of mine. Ed Hanley lives in Alaska and Seattle. Bill Hanley lives at Burns. Bob Miller lives in Portland and is a politician and lawyer. Ben Beekman also lives in Portland. The first have scattered hither and yon. "In the early '70s I took a band of cattle over the Green Spring trail to Klamath county and we took up a place in Langells valley, not far from Linkville. Linkville—now Klamath Falls—at that time had but one store and a hotel run by Uncle George Nurse. Mat Langell was a shoemaker at Jacksonville. His brother Arthur was a stockman. The valley was named for these brothers. My son, Ivan E. Kilgore, bought the 2800 acre ranch owned by Arthur Langell. Ranch was killed in a dispute over a pasture boundary. I married Nettie Herron of Ashland. Her brother Dave lives here in Portland and her brother Fred in Ashland. Her brother Will is the head of the legal department of the Southern Pacific and lives in San Francisco. "I was in the Modoc war. I made two trips to the mouth of Lost river. I drove the rig in which we brought out Meacham, the peace commissioner. He had been knocked on the head and partially scalped. Later he, with an associate, got up a Indian show and took it east. Some of his Indians couldn't stand the east, so they got away and made their way back to Klamath county. The promoters had all sorts of evil luck; so the show broke up. "In the early days packers got nine cents a pound for bringing in freight on the pack horses from Ashland to Linkville. Lots of the freight was wet goods and it flowed pretty freely. As a consequence, there used to be occasional killings in the saloons. I happened to be in one of the saloons when a man named White was shot and killed over a difference of opinion in a poker game. One of the men who worked for me, Frank Trimble, was killed in the lava beds. It was foggy. He thought he saw an Indian, and so he raised up to get a better view and fell back dead. It was an Indian he had seen, and the Indian got him—through the head."
