VISITS AFTER TWENTY YEARS
Former Ashland School Principal Visits Old Friends

They all come back. After twenty years pent in various parts of the northwest, Robert A. Hopkins, principal of the North school where the Junior high school now stands, returned to Ashland Saturday for a brief visit with friends for the sake of "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Hopkins is with a Portland company, manufacturing waterproofing preparation and left for his northern headquarters after reviewing old times.

Mr. Hopkins concluded his teaching days in city, afterward going to Spokane, Wash., and later locating at Portland. Because of the birth of his son, Alfred C. Hopkins here, he has many pleasant memories of Ashland.
Mr. Hopkins' father-in-law, William Huse, formerly published an Ashland newspaper here known as Town Talk. Mr. Huse afterwards moved to Klamath Falls where he published the Record, later selling his interests there. Gene Huse, son of the one time Ashland publisher, is owner of the Wayne Herald, Wayne, Neb. a paper recognized in newspaperdom as the best country weekly in the United States.

ENGLISH PREMIER STARTS PARTY TO WIN IN ELECTION

COLLAPSE OF COALITION WILL NOT NECESSARILY MEAN THE DOWNFALL OF EMPIRE'S ASTUTE WELSH PREMIER, LLOYD GEORGE.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The political future of the prime minister is the most talked-of subject throughout Great Britain. When he appeals to the country for a new lease of power within the next few months, will he be able to retain his position? The coalition government is quickly breaking up. It is hated by liberals and Tories, while labor will have nothing to do with it. It is so unpopular that no candidate at an election dare brand himself as a coalitionist.

Neither the Irish settlement nor the results of the Washington conference have increased the standing of the government in the slightest degree.

Therefore, the premier, without a party or organization of his own, finds himself apparently tied to a mass of unpopularity which must break into its component parts—thus ceasing to exist—and be, either singly or as a whole, snowed under in the coming fight. Lloyd George is far too astute to be caught in this fashion. When the coalition breaks, Lloyd George will be a leader without a party. Therefore he has decided to form a party of his own.

To do this he has to find his chief adherents. First of all, he has picked those members whom he does not need. Of these, Austin Chamberlain comes first. He is unpopular and would permeate the new party with the old Toryism. Lord Curzon comes next. Useful in some ways, he is a Jonah when it comes to active politics. Balfour doesn't matter either way—he is a very old man. Worthington Evans, secretary of the war department, and Stanley Baldwin, secretary of the board of trade, Lord Lee of Farnham are three fairly able mediocrities.

The two men whose co-operation stood out absolutely necessary are Winston Churchill and Lord Birkenhead. Next to the premier they are the two most powerful forces in British politics. Both are marked out for the premiership, and Lloyd George says that he does not mind which gets it after he is through with the job. Then comes Sir Robert Horne, who within a few years has risen to be chancellor of the exchequer. Next came the two very able millionaire Jews, Sir Alfred Mond and Edwin S. Montagu, and so on to the second raters. Together these represent liberalism and Toryism in about equal sections. Their one party principle is allegiance to Lloyd George, coupled with success at the forthcoming election.

The program will be of a gently progressive nature but strongly anti-socialistic and anti-communistic. Opposition to bolshevism will be one of its chief planks. Moderate social reforms will loom large. This party Lloyd George will lead unchallenged. It will doubtless attract an enormous amount of support throughout the country, particularly among women, to whom the old party names mean little or nothing.
On these lines the premier believes he can again sweep the country at the election which is at hand. Consequently he looks forward to another long term of untrammelled power.
