LUMBERJACKS SOON TO BE BACK IN THE BIG WOODS

(By International News Service) PORTLAND, Jan. 17.-Lumbern in the Pacific northwest have announced that they will soon be operating their lumber camps with an employment double that of last

The announcement was followed by a feeling of optimism regarding the unemployment situation in this section.

The lumbermen plan to operate on such a large scale that they even anticipate a shortage of labor in some classes.

And that was not the worst of it. He ran home so scared that he didn't remember running at all after it was over. Mrs. Possum didn't know him, but thought he was some terrible white creature come to carry off her children and slammed the door right in his face.

All night Mr. Possum had to sit outside, the whitewash dripping from his coat, and in the morning, bright and early, all the little bunnles and Mr. and Mrs. Rabbit-as well were standing in front of the house looking at him.

Mrs. Rabbit wanted to know what he meant by carrying off some of her whitewash. "Mr. Rabbit and I and all the little bunnies tracked you, and you need not deny it," she said. Mr. Possum did not try to deny it, for what was the use? He was all covered with the white stuff. WATCH SAVES HIS LIFE

Bullet Fired From Robber's Pistol Shattered It.

A watch, shattered by a bullet fired by one of two robbers who were burglarizing a motor company's storehouse, at Hancock, Ind., at one o'clock one morning recently, saved the life of Constable Barnhart.

The robber discovered the officer approaching and fired. The bullet, after striking the watch, which Barnhart wore in his vest pocket over his heart, glanced and passed out through his coat.

The watch is one his brother, Arthur Barnhart, carried when he was killed by a bullet six years ago. The
