LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY IS CLOSE AT HAND

The anniversary of Lincoln's birth is near at hand and should receive the honor due to such a great event, an event so important to the Union and the people of our great republic. Lincoln had all the attributes of greatness, and the massive scenes of the last few years have not obscured his great personality. The Armory should be crowded to the doors with young and old American citizens, who would hear the songs and listen to the stories of the famous man and deeds of the great war which threatened the nation's life.

ASHLAND STUDY CLUB HAVE SOCIAL SESSION

The ladies of the Ashland Study club held their annual mid-year social session Monday evening at the Episcopal parish house, the affair taking the form of a 7 o'clock community dinner, at which the husbands of the members were the guests. Covers were laid for 40, and the gathering at the festal board was a merry one which greatly enjoyed the menu. A program of toasts appropriate to the occasion followed. Mrs. A. G. Adams presided as toastmistress and cleverly introduced the several speakers.

"Man's place in a woman's club" was declared by Victor Mills to be at the "eats." H. E. Badger told a well arranged story about this particular club. Mrs. H. C. Galey talked about "Slang," exemplifying some of the popular forms. Mrs. Mahigram of Phoenix told of "Blunders—good and bad," with a personal application which highly entertained the company. Mrs. F. S. Engle discussed "Men and manners," and quoted an apt verse, "Which Fork." A live topic—"The woman juror"—was assigned to E. V. Carter, who gave a personal glimpse of the author of the Oregon woman juror law, the Hon. Mrs. Kinney of Astoria. Mr. Carter advised the ladies, if they wished to make a success of the suffrage, to do their part cheerfully in sharing its burdens and responsibilities with the men.

The program concluded with a humorous auction sale of alleged Russian and other bric-a-brac, conducted by the Rev. P. K. Hammond, as auctioneer.

REMEDY FOR NERVES

Concentration Is Recommended by Eminent Music Director.

Cultivate an interest in Work, an Interest That Becomes Absorbing—This Absorption Prevents Attention From Wandering.

London.—What are we to do about our "nerves"? It is the question which bothers half the world today. Everybody who has to work under the eye of a critic, from the orator who wonders how his speech is going to the shop girl who is aware of the shop-walker's eye while she is selling a yard of ribbon, is liable to an attack of what we call "nerves."

To all such sufferers, says the Daily Mail, Sir Hugh Allen spoke when, as director of the Royal College of Music, he addressed the students of the college at the opening of the new term. He was speaking mainly to those who are or will become public performers of music—but his words apply to everybody.

"It is not much to say," he declared, "that nerves are the most needed ingredient in the performer's outfit, and that nervousness has brought distress if not disaster to countless musicians. 'Nerve' and 'nervous' are words which have the most diverse meaning in our language. We speak of nerve as of something strong, vigorous, as courage and boldness and assurance, and of nerves as a disordered state of the nervous system."

"By 'nerves' we mean that miserable state which attacks us at all turns of the road, when we have to play or sing, when we don't know our work, when we are late, when we have to do things in front of others. Personally I know of no greater discomfort."

"I have known a man called upon to speak suddenly among friends to be absolutely dumb, and another to have uttered a string of unintelligible nonsense. I have known conductors who confessed to a feeling of complete blankness at the beginning of a concert."

"Now the paradox of the whole affair is that you cannot be a really good performer or conductor unless you are nervous (in a sense and in the right degree), and you cannot be if you are nervous! The case is really this: It is only those who have nervous susceptibility and a delicately balanced and well controlled nervous system who will ever make an appeal by their performance."

Beyond the need for obtaining their full knowledge of the matter in hand Sir Hugh advises the nervous "to cultivate an interest in work, an interest which becomes absorbing, which means that our minds are taken up with what we are doing—not with why we are doing it. This absorption prevents our attention from wandering. The power of attention which enables us to concentrate upon what we are doing, and to become unsusceptible to outside influences, but it is also the best way to build up character."

NEW DISCOVERY MADE IN RUINS OF THEBES PALACE

Proof Found, as Believed, That Cadmus First Brought Alphabet to Greece.

Doctor Karamopoulos, one of the Greek inspectors of antiquities, has accomplished some most interesting work in the ruins of the palace at Thebes.

According to legend, this palace was founded by Cadmus, who is said to have first brought the alphabet to Greece. In previous campaigns the remains of the fresco decorations of the earlier palace, 1600 to 1400 B. C., were brought to light. This consisted largely of a frieze of elaborately dressed and coiffured women carrying flowers, painted jugs or ivory boxes.

This year the excavator has found some of the storerooms of the later palace, 1400 to 1100 B. C. From these there have been extracted a hundred or more big stirrup jars. They are unfortunately broken, but they can be put together again.

A considerable number of these jars have painted on them inscriptions in the still undecipherable Mycenaean alphabet. The letters, or rather signs, are of a hieroglyphic character and are derived, but differ, from the well-known and equally undecipherable Cretan prehistoric alphabet.

Scientists believe it possible that the difference of alphabet means a difference of language.

However much professors may dispute about the meaning and character of these alphabets, Athens archeological circles attach special interest to the fact that ancient tradition has once more been proved right by the discovery of what might be called Cadmean letters in the ruins of Cadmus' city.

FERGUSON'S BIG CLOSING OUT SALE

Save the bird in hand— The others may be hard to catch With enough money, enough time and enough luck, a man may get back the health he has lost—or part of it. It takes patience, too. And then there may be no success, or only a little. It's better to save what you have than hunt for what you've lost—as the most successful health-restorers will tell you. Much of the loss of health is due to faulty, careless diet. Wrong meals at all times and right meals at wrong times load the long-suffering digestive organs with elements of destruction, or starve the tissues and glands of needed elements. Grape-Nuts is a delicious cereal food which has the qualities of scientific nutrition. It supplies the full richness of those splendid food grains, wheat and malted barley, together with the vital mineral elements, so often lacking from foods. Served with cream or good milk, Grape-Nuts gives full nourishment without over-loading the stomach. A splendid thought for breakfast or lunch, for those who would keep health— Grape Nuts—the Body Builder "There's a Reason" Made by Postum Cereal Company, Inc., Battle Creek, Michigan
