Miss Theresa Katona

(International News Service) NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—"I think my daughter is doing a very serious thing, but there is no other alternative."

This was the comment of the mother of 18-year-old Theresa Katona, who has offered to marry on her next birthday, November 28, any man, providing he is a Christian and is healthy, who will now contribute $1000 to the support of her mother, father and younger brothers and sisters. They are poverty stricken in their home in the rear of No. 195 Green street, Greenpoint, Brooklyn.

Speaking with the aid of her younger daughter, Anna, aged 15, Mrs. Katona, who is Polish and can speak no English, added: "We have no money for rent, my husband is out of work and sick; I myself am feeble, and we need food for the children."

Theresa refused to talk, though she occasionally pushed her head into view long enough to listen and to confirm the report that she had made the offer. She is auburn haired, with dark hazel eyes, fine teeth and strong, regular features. It was learned that Katona has been ill for some time and that the girl also had been unable to get work. The couple have been in this country for 19 years. The other children in the family are Anna, 15; John, 14; Julia, 12; Michael, 7; Theodore, 5, and Mary, 3.
