FOODS YOU DON'T LIKE: OTHERS DO

That we are far too conservative regarding our choice of foodstuffs is evidenced by the varied selection consumed by dwellers in other lands. There seems to be a national prejudice against certain articles of diet, which, if overcome, would lead to a more abundant food supply for an ever-increasing population.

There is nothing wrong with grasshoppers if they are prepared in the proper manner. If scriptural evidence counts for anything, they are a delectable delicacy, and permission was granted by Moses to use them as an article of food.

There are two families of these insects, brown and green. As Scripture is not a cookery recipe book, we give the following as the best method of preparation:

The crop of grasshoppers may be collected wherever found. There will be no difficulty in locating them, for the male is a loquacious insect, delighting to hear his own rasping chirp as he scrapes one wing against the other.

Pounded to a Paste
The grasshoppers are then placed in a mortar and pounded with the pestle into a pulp. One quart of port wine is added, the whole being worked up to form a stiff compound. This makes a novel sandwich paste for those who like to try novel dishes. Grape juice served the same purpose as port.

Many, of course, might prefer sandwich paste made of ants; the natives of Africa are partial to this compound. It forms an extremely nourishing delicacy.

Junker, the African explorer, relates that the chief of a tribe on the Mescharch River, sent him twenty hampers of dried ants for provisions on his journey.

The ants can be pounded into a paste. They have a distinctly meaty flavor, not unlike kidney or fresh mackerel.

Moths and butterflies might not seem to us of much value as a food, but the Romans used them, as well as beetles, as an article of diet.

Even Files Are Used
The Brazilians are fond of an insect that feeds on the palm-leaf.

In Chili and Peru one of the national dishes is composed of potatoes and a beetle-like insect called a "chicho." It is found in large numbers under vines along the watercourses.

Files are not to be ignored in making a list of queer things people eat. The blacks of Narragansett, in Africa, dine upon the larvae of a common fly, which they find under the bark of certain trees.

It is astonishing the diversity of substances in the catalogue of articles of food. Nearly every species of vertebrate animal is eaten by human beings somewhere or other.

In the Andaman Islands, the eating of a live rat is deemed a test of manhood, and no man is permitted to marry until he has accomplished this feat. The Chinese are not above indulging in partial dog cutlets, for American Indians have from time immemorial been fond of this dish.

A century ago, the negroes of Louisiana, considered roast dog as food for the gods.

"THE BRIDGE BUILDER"

An old man traveling a lone highway
Came at the evening cold and gray,
To a chasm deep and wide.
The old man crossed in a twilight dim,
For the sullen stream held no fear for him,
For he turned when he reached the other side,
And builded a bridge to span the tide.

"Old man," cried a fellow pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength with building here.
Your journey will end with the ending day
And you never again will pass this way.
You have crossed the chasm deep and wide,
Why build a bridge at eventide?"

And the builder raised his old gray head,
"Good friend, on the path I have come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet will pass this way.
This stream which has been naught to me,
To that fair-haired boy may a pitfall be,
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim,
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him."

A donkey found a lion's skin
And promptly clad himself therein,
Then roamed about in swiftness pride,
Showing the other beasts aside.

Pleased at the sight the beasts displayed,
The donkey raised his voice and brayed,
The other animals got wise
And stripped him of his false disguise.

BE SURE
of perfect results on bake-day. Don't spend your time in preparing bakings that contain expensive ingredients and be disappointed when you take them out of the oven. Use not because it's the biggest selling brand on earth, but because it is absolutely the most dependable and economical of all leaveners.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

When you employ Calumet Baking Powder you know that your bakings will raise properly because it contains more than the ordinary leavening strength.

Don't waste energy and money on uncertain baking powder—use Calumet, the pure and sure brand.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powder comes in 12 oz. cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.
