What Constitutes Advertising
 In order to allay a misunderstanding among some as to what constitutes news and what advertising, we print this very simple rule, which is used by newspapers to differentiate between them: "ALL future events, where an admission charge is made or a collection is taken IS ADVERTISING." This applies to organizations and societies of every kind as well as to individuals.

All reports of such activities after they have occurred is news.
 All coming social or organization meetings of societies where no money contribution is solicited, initiation charged, or collection taken IS NEWS.

FARMING THE FARMER FOR "PORK"

"Some" insurance companies and "some" farm mortgage loan companies are charged with holding up the farmers on interest rates; also that the federal reserve board allowed ruinous artificial deflation to bring agriculture to its present deplorable straits. This is attempt to discredit these industries generally by half truths.

The "charges" should be sufficient to land any politician in office.

But why, if private institutions are charging usurious interest rates, does not the proper public official punish such offenders under our present laws instead of casting aspersion at legitimate business. It is all part of the game to aid in the movement to "socialize" American industries and increase the official tax burden of the people by putting the government constantly deeper into business at public expense.

THE NON-PARTISAN NIGHTMARE

In commenting on the Non-partisan league and its campaign for members and political control in other states, the Sheridan, Wyo., Post says:

"The fact cannot be denied that theoretically they have good arguments to put before the people—arguments which won them success in North Dakota, until the practical end developed that the whole thing was theoretical and not practical, and that when they put the bankers, the newspapers and other institutions out of business, they left their membership helpless and stranded in the web of Townleyism.

"To the socialist, it is splendid, the thought of putting the banker out of business, as well as the merchant, or any man who has built up a payroll. They are using the farmer as a club. They fail to realize that the world of industry needs generals if life is to have in store for them what our constitution guarantees. However, North Dakota has had a sad awakening, making it necessary now that if Townley is to maintain his organization and income he must look for fields anew."

PUBLIC FORUM

To the editor of the Tidings:

In looking over the article appearing in the Tidings of March 13, I find where there are two mistakes in print. The first is: "Mingling with the rays of the morning sun are these letters OPPORTUNITY." It should read, "Mingling with the rays of the morning sun are these letters PROSPERITY." I wished to convey the idea that if the citizens of Ashland grasped "opportunity," "prosperity" would follow.

The second misprint and one that I wish you to correct in justice to myself, as I have friends among the older inhabitants of Ashland who have been foremost in every progressive measure that would benefit the city. I have a copy of the manuscript which was sent to the Tidings, and instead of the article reading thus: "There are people all over the streets of Ashland who have lived here for years. They will tell us, 'I might have been rich,' etc." The article should read: "There are people all over the world today who are crying out and trying to grasp lost opportunities. We meet them on
 lived here for years, and they will tell us, 'I might have been rich if I had known Ashland would amount to anything,' etc."

Trusting you will make the above correction, we still believe the greatest need of Ashland is a modern tourist hotel.

PORTLAND, March 18.—George A. Coddling, of Medford, Oregon, the present vice-commander of the state organization of the Legion, has announced his candidacy for commander for the Oregon department for the coming year. While in Portland attending the state executive committee of which body he is an active member, Mr. Coddling announced his intentions of running for the com-mandership of the Department of Oregon. Coddling has been interested in Legion activities following his discharge from the war as an enlisted man.

Entre Vous, the official paper of Lake County Post No. 53, of Lakeview, has made its initial appearance.
 Entre Vous is French for "Between Ourselves," and contains Legion
 news.

PORTLAND, March 18.—The hor-or roll of posts in the state of Oregon that had "gone over the top" in the first three months of the year and exceeded their 1921 membership includes: Marshfield, Seaside, Dallas, McMinnville, Fossil, Grants Pass, North Bend, Hermiston, Redmond, Creswell, North Powder, Mos-tier, Sherwood, Antelope, Clatskanie, Haines, Banks and Stanfield and Nyssa.
 A great number of other posts in the department will go over the top shortly. The state organization now ranks third among the Legion departments in the Union in point of membership.

SISTERS, Or., March 18.—Suttle Lake, a scenic resort in the Cascades, 15 miles from Sisters, will be the scene of an annual encampment of Charles W. Whittlesley Post No. 107, of Sisters. The lake furnishes splendid facilities for boating, bathing, fishing, picnicking and other sports, including dancing. All Legionnaires in Oregon will be invited and a big representation from Central Oregon Legion posts is expected.

ASTORIA, Or., March 18.—Clatsop Post No. 12 of Astoria held welcoming and presentation certificates to 16 new American citizens admitted to full rights following the recent examinations held in Astoria.

Money in His Shoes.
 A Pole named Pietr Talla, traveling from America to Danzig, was taken ill recently in the Y. M. C. A. hut, Waterloo road, London, and removed to the infirmary. He had only two shillings threepence in English money, but hidden in his clothing he had 22 $10 gold pieces and paper money to the value of $800. His shoes were found to be very heavy, and when they were photographed by the X-ray, 12 large coins, presumably $10 gold pieces, were found hidden between the leather and the soles of each boot.—

LOST CABIN MINE

"It was gold!"

"Yes, there it was, in coarse yellow grains and lumps—richer than a dream. He dropped suddenly to examine the bar on which he stood; it, too, was gorgeous with the glittering metal, and he rose with a whoop of joy that made the woods echo, and brought Henry running to the spot—for he had heard it and recognized his brother's voice, on the other side of the little valley. You can imagine their ecstasy. They had known poverty all their lives, and there before them was wealth—sudden, splendid, exhaustless. But I must not linger. Working together they finished their cabin that day, and the next began to gather the gold. The labor was not great, and within two weeks' time they had heaped together a marvelous quantity of it, and began to contemplate a return.

"Life was now precious, and, after thinking it over, and weighing the chances for and against the practicability of getting back unmolested, they were convinced that it was best to remain where they were until the volunteer forces under General Lane, which they knew were on the way, had reached the hostile country and relieved the hard paths of mountain travel from the wily foe that lurked on every step. Having made an excavation in the center of the cabin floor, they lined it carefully with rock and, in the vault thus formed, deposited their treasure tied up in bags of dried and un-dressed deerskin. This was done in case an attack from the Indians should compel them to flee, when, of course, it would be impossible to carry the heavy metal.

"But no attack was made, and, after a lapse of several weeks, they arose one morning and agreed that it was time to be upon the homeward trail. The sheeny forest leaves waved in the soft winds of morning, and the fresh air was musical with the songs of birds, as, fully armed they strode forth spiritedly to bring in their horses, which had grown fat and vigorous upon the bountiful pasture.

The cabin stood near the stream, in the edge of the wood, and when they had approached within forty yards of it, suddenly a score of rifles crashed upon them from the bank, followed by the terrible war cry of the Shastas.

Henry, who it happened was in front of James leading two of the horses, sank with a deadly groan, his horses rearing and falling at the same time. The Indians burst from their cover and sprang forward with all the echoes of pandemonium.
 James emptied his rifle with fearful aim among them, and drew his revolver. The Indians knew the kind of music they had to face, and, having neglected to reload, dashed back to the cover of the bank. The resolute miner saw his salvation in this movement, and, hastily tossing a noose halter over the head of the only horse that remained uninjured, leaped upon his back and was out of immediate danger in an instant—careering down the valley with the scattering shots of the enemy singing over his head. The war party being afoot, he was not followed, and finally reached the frontier settlements after a journey of incredible hardship.

"As the Indian war continued without abatement, he took passage to San Francisco in order to obtain medical advice in regard to his health, which exposure and privation had badly broken. Then it was that he began the correspondence with me. I was in Chicago at the time.

"Unexpectedly receiving news of his death in the fall of 1859, I hastened to San Francisco, and received from the hands of his landlord a little bundle of papers, among which I found this. Read it; no explanation is required."

He handed me a folded sheet of paper, on which a letter had been begun, in a cramped, ungainly, but still legible hand. Here it is:

"San Francisco, Oct. 26, '59.

"Dear Cousin: I had hoped to see you before this, but the end has come sooner than I expected. I dreamed of that cabin in the wilds of Oregon, last night, and saw poor Harry fall again before the cowardly shots of those cowardly Shastas; and I think it is nearly over. I must write what I intended to have spoken, and endeavor to give you such directions as will enable you to find the cabin, for you must find it, Theodore, and enjoy its hidden gold. The first part of your course is plain enough: Start from Jacksonville and keep the California road for—"

Here the hand of death stayed the revealing pen and there remained only a black and shapeless ink-blot, as a fit emblem of the mystery that

CUSTARD AND CUSTARD DESSERTS

Milk and eggs are probably the most important foods in the diet.
 Either milk alone or milk and eggs constitute the diet of children and invalids and also are an important factor in the nutrition of healthy adults. The desirable qualities in milk are in no way destroyed by ordinary cooking. Whole milk contains all the food principles—protein, carbohydrates, water and minerals.
 Milk should be scalded, not boiled, as boiling renders it somewhat indigestible. Eggs also contain all the necessary food principles and are very easily digested in cooked at moderate heat. The combination of milk and eggs furnishes many palatable wholesome desserts. Custards are divided into two classes, the boiled or liquid custards, which are steamed or cooked over hot water on top of the range, and the baked or solid custard, which is steamed in the oven. All custard mixtures should be set in hot water to cook and the water kept just under the boiling point. This gives the moderate heat required for all custards. It prevents the custard reaching the boiling point. If cooked too fast or directly in a dry heat, the mixture will separate and curdle. Certain rules govern the making of custards, whether they are to be cooked in the oven or on top of a stove. Milk should be heated in a double boiler or over hot water; when bubbles appear on the surface the milk is scalded. Eggs should be beaten slightly—just enough to mix the yolk and white. When eggs are used as a thickening medium, as in custards, they are not beaten until light. Sugar is gradually added to the eggs and the hot milk poured over the egg and sugar mixture. Eggs should not be added to a hot mixture; the hot liquid should be added to the eggs, otherwise the eggs will cook as they are added to the milk and the mixture would not be smooth. The custard is now ready to steam or bake.

 All custard puddings, pies, etc., are first mixed in this manner. The type of custard desired depends upon the number of eggs used to each cup or half-pint of milk. One egg to a cupful of milk will give a liquid custard; or two yolks or eggs will give the same results as to consistency; a custard made entirely of egg yolks is much richer than one made of whole eggs.

wrapped the whereabouts of the lost cabin. I turned from the paper and looked at Harper—for such was the name by which he introduced himself to me.

"That is all I know about it," said he, "and here is my proposition: Let us jointly purchase an outfit and spend the summer in the mountains of southern Oregon. With the clew we have I verily believe we shall find the cabin."

"I am with you," and I gave him a steadfast grip.

Harper flushed with pleasure at the prompt and hearty acquiescence, and we sat talking over the details of our expedition until the gray eye of dawn looked in, and, with a cold, unsympathizing stare admonished us that our sitting had been unnaturally protracted.
