TOLD OF KITCHENER'S DEATH?

Interesting Story That Has Recently Appeared in Book Published by English Author.

Lady Angela Forbes in her book "Memories and Base Details," says that Lord Kitchener was interested in spiritualism, and that he was undoubtedly not only interested, but a believer in it.

"Count Hamon, better known as Cheiro, told me a story which to the incredulous may only appear as coincidence, but cannot fail to be interesting.

"Count Hamon was a friend of Kitchener's, and in reading his horoscope had, apparently, always told him that his death would be a sudden one, but that he need not anticipate danger in the field of battle. Just before Lord K. went abroad, Count H. went to the war office, and K. showed him a little blue vase, which he had once given him as a mascot, and told him that he always kept it on the table. He asked Count H. if there was anything he could do for him before he left the country. The count replied in the negative, but K. told him there was one thing he would do—if anything happened to him he would give him a sign. At the very hour the Hampshire went down, Count Hamon was in the music room of his house in the country, at one end of which was a large hatchment, securely nailed to the wall. For no reason at all it fell with a crash, and might have been cleft in two by an ax. Count Hamon guessed instantly that something had happened to Lord Kitchener, and that this must be the promised sign."

And So a Wily, Unscrupulous Russian Bachelor Was Forced to "Kill Off" His Family.

Necessity has sharpened the wits of the Russians and they discover most ingenious devices to profit at the expense of the government. A shrewd physician in Petrograd, who was a bachelor with a hearty appetite and a small income, induced the president of the house committee where he resided to give him a certificate saying he was married. In this way he procured a double ration. Soon his imaginary wife fell ill and he got a milk card on the strength of it. Later a baby came to bless this fictitious union, and he was entitled to additional delicacies as a result. Unfortunately, he got his dates mixed up and announced the arrival of three children inside of six months.

An investigation was started, upon which an epidemic broke out in his family, which carried away, inside of two days, his wife, two daughters and little boy.

It was a dreadful massacre on paper. But it saved the physician, who got off undetected.—J. Kessel in Le Figaro, Paris.

Story of a Famous Old Timer. An esteemed correspondent recalls two little stories of that eminent Ohioan Gov. David Tod, who, among his other official distinctions, numbered that of minister to Brazil, appointed by President Polk and holding the office five years.

When it was noised about among the future governor's old friends and acquaintances that he had been made minister to Brazil, one of them drawled: "Wal, all I got to say is that Dave'll make a shead of a minister!"

When Minister Tod officially interviewed Don Pedro II in Rio Janeiro, he said to his interpreter: "Tell the emperor that if he will hurry up the carrying out of that request I made him I'll send him a car load of the best Brier Hill coal my people can mine."

As coal wasn't used in Rio, the interpreter collapsed.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Grades for British Apples. The British apple growers have recently been devoting considerable attention to the establishment of grades for their product and much progress has been made in this development. The chief reason for the movement is the desire to place on the large British markets an apple grown in England which will compare favorably in price with the best American and Australasian product. It has often been stated in England that the market advantage of the American apple is entirely due to the fact that it is correctly graded and packed.

There is no large supply of British apples which could be closely graded for market. The British growers generally have not paid much attention to market requirements in the selection of their trees nor to the care and cultivation of orchards.

Starched Cash Like New. A Detroit woman had what she styled a "connoition fit" recently. She was washing some aprons and forgot that she left some money in the pockets of one. She didn't remember it until she had starched them. "The money was soaked, but when I dried it and ironed it it was pretty stiff and resembled new currency. This caused the grocer to ask me where I'd made them," she said.

Another illustration of how Rogue River valley pears are consumed all over the world is contained in a letter just received by Guy Conner of the Conner fruit packing company of Medford, from Alfred S. V. Carpenter, a Medford orchardist, and printed in the Mail Tribune. Writing from Hotel Mount Everest, Darjeeling, India, February 1, on his trip around the world, Mr. Carpenter says:

"This is just a line to tell you about some of your pears. The steward of the Creole State, of the Pacific Mail S. S. Co., told me he had some fine pears he was saving to give the passengers on the return trip from India to San Francisco. I asked to see the pears, and the day we landed in Calcutta he took me down to his cold storage plant.

"I found some Hood River Spitzenbergs in excellent shape and several fine winter Nelis pears, packed by Guy Conner. They were in perfect condition, although the paper wraps were entirely wet. He spoke very highly of them. It may be truly said that Rogue River pears go to all parts of the world.

LOCAL ORCHARDIST FINDS ROGUE FRUIT ON ORIENTAL SHIPS

Not in the Ritual, but Effective. General Pershing tells the story of a volunteer battalion of rough backwoods men that once joined General Grant. He admired their fine physique, but distrusted the capacity of their uncouth commander to handle troops promptly and efficiently in the field, so he said:

"Colonel, I want to see your men at work: call them to attention and order them to march with shouldered arms in close column to the left flank."

Without a moment's hesitation the colonel yelled to his fellow ruffians: "Boys, look wild that! Make ready to thicken and go left end-ways. Tote yer guns! Git!"

The maneuver proved a brilliant success and the self-selected colonel was forthwith officially commissioned.—The Boys' Own Paper.
