DOMESTIC SCIENCE

A regular feature department edited by Mrs. Belle DeGraf Domestic Science Director California Prune & Pricot Growers Inc.

Shellfish Shellfish are divided into classes—clams, oysters, scallops and mussels belong to one class, and lobster, crabs, shrimps and crawfish belong to another class.

Oysters are the most important of the shellfish, although shrimps are higher in food value. Both clams and oysters are more easily digested if eaten raw.

With the exception of the lobster, all fish are easy to digest, although the lean fish is more readily assimilated than the fat. The flesh of the lobster is coarse, dense and difficult of digestion.

To scallop fish, place alternating layers of fish and soft bread-crumbs in a buttered baking dish, covering the whole with milk or a thin white sauce, season with salt and pepper and bake until firm. Variety may be given this dish by using tomato sauce instead of milk.

To cook fillets of fish, wash and dry, season, roll in fine bread-crumbs, dip in slightly beaten egg diluted with one tablespoon of cold water; dip in crumbs again; then fry in deep fat. Prepare all the fillets before beginning to cook any of them. Vegetable oil is the best fat to use for frying fish. Heat until a very slight trace of smoke can be seen, then test with a cube of bread. Drop bread in the fat and count forty. If the fat is right the bread will be a golden brown. If too hot, it will be burned, if not hot enough, it will not be brown. Test the fat each time before adding the fish. Drain fried fish on brown paper. This is the best method for frying fish. It will be crisp and if the fat has been properly tested the fish will not be oily. Serve with tartar sauce or slices of lemon.

Oyster Stew Two cups of raw oysters, two cups thin white sauce. Cook oysters in their own liquor or water until the edges slightly curl. Have white sauce prepared and combine just before serving. For white sauce melt two tablespoons of butter, add two tablespoons of flour; mix until well blended, then cook until frothy and add two cups of milk or half milk and half oyster liquor. Season and serve.

Fried Oysters Drain and dry oysters. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Beat one egg, add one tablespoon of cold water. Dip oysters in fine dry bread-crumbs.

"If I Could Only Get Up That Gas"

I KNOW I WOULD FEEL BETTER How often have you felt that way? How often have you wished for something to give you genuine and lasting relief from gas?

Don't buy any ordinary dyspepsia tablets for temporary results. Go to a first class drug store and ask for a bottle of genuine Baalmann's Gas Tablets. Take three tablets an hour before meals and again three after eating—then watch. Now comes a surprise. No more gas, no more smothered feeling, no difficult breathing, no bloating.

Remember, Baalmann's Gas Tablets are not only for the relief, but also for the prevention of gas. Most people with gas suffer from nervous dyspepsia—not common indigestion. Baalmann's Gas Tablets in the famous yellow package, are sold by Elhart's Drug Store and other reliable druggists. J. Baalmann, Chemist, San Francisco.

WOULD PRESERVE OLD HOUSE

Efforts Being Made to Raise Money to Buy Dwelling Dating From Seventeenth Century.

Some who love good things—and happily interest in the architecture of former ages is awakening more and more—are trying to preserve a remarkable old peasant's dwelling at Harrevel, a lonely hamlet on the heather in the province of Gelderland. It is called los luis, dating from the Seventeenth century and the last house of the Saxon type. Los, in the Gelderland dialect, means open, by which it is indicated that the house consists of one room only and that there are no partitions between the places for housing and sleeping for men and beasts; cows and goats and chickens living peacefully together with the inmates. There is no chimneyplace; the wood fire burns in a hole in the floor, which is of stone, and the smoke is allowed to find an outlet as it pleases.

The peasants, man and wife, who are living here are beset with the extremely modern, yet most unfortunate thought of having a wall built between the stable and the dwelling room, adding a chimney and building another room, by all of which renovations the house will be irretrievably spoiled.

The managing committee of the open-air museum at Arnhem are now trying to get money together in order to buy the house and have it removed to their museum park. It is much to be hoped that they will meet with a prompt success.

Improbable Story Beginnings. Vladanlutch noticed the excellent diction of the street car conductors in announcing the stations.

When Shamalback pulled up at the garage he found the prices had not been arbitrarily raised because he was a tourist.

The maid opened the door and Coralia entered with the umbrella she had borrowed the week before.
