Arthur Brisbane, quoting Frank Munsey as authority for the statement, says that before the war there were 41 royal dynasties, and today, there are only 17 to mourn the passing of Charles of Austria, and adds "The war was a curse, but if comething could do for mosquitoes, rats, mice, white ants and the tsetse fly what the war did for royalty, it would be welcome at any reasonable

To the "stranger within our gates" it must appear curious that there are no signs anywhere to indicate the location of Lithia Park, not even at its entrance. It has been suggested that an arch at the entrance with the legend, "Lithia Park," would be particularly appropos. It need not be costly to be beautiful. Where timber is as plentiful as it is here, it could be constructed on the rustic order, and if lighted at night, would be decidedly artistic and attractive.
