AMERICAN LEGION

When the Paris "Figaro" published a cartoon against the payment of the expenses of the United States army of occupation, the American Legion in France registered a healthy kick. The picture showed a doughboy pushing aside Marianne as the latter is about to take a plunge of gold from Germany.

When John A. Isham, of Boise, Idaho, discovered that Oscar Weymire, his old bunkmate in the army, had not paid his American Legion dues, he decided to visit Weymire. The latter was tramping 300 miles away, but Isham made the trip by foot, horse and skates and brought in the dues.

The strength that won the Argonne and St. Mihiel is being used to guard New York against payroll and bank messenger robberies. The American Legion is furnishing ex-soldiers who go heavily armed with the men and women who carry huge sums through the business sections.

Every chamber of commerce in the state of Washington has voted in favor of the American Legion's plan for adjusted compensation.

When a carnival pitched its tents on his hotel property and an appeal to the authorities proved of no avail, Charles E. Young Sr., of St. Augustine, Fla., used the old sea method of showing distress and hung the American flag on his hostelry upside down. The American Legion protested the act and Young publicly apologized.

The Chicago, Ill., board of aldermen, has voted to send a delegation of five of its members to Washington to help in the fight for the American Legion's bill for adjusted compensation.

Alexander Lochwitzky, a former Russian count, and a major in the American army during the world war, has sent an appeal to the New York American Legion asking that a job be found for him "doing anything." He speaks eight languages fluently. Everything he had was lost in the San Antonio flood.

Because the ex-soldier doesn't speak German, and the man he named does, Congressman Edward Voigt, of the Second Wisconsin district, refused the request of the American Legion that Clyde Ellis, world war veteran, be appointed postmaster at Elkhart Lake, Wis.

When a tornado struck Corinth, Miss., the mayor called on the American Legion post to furnish an armed patrol to prevent pillaging. For hours after the catastrophe the ex-service men were on the job in the stricken areas.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis flatly refused to become an honorary member of the American Legion when the honor was offered him following his speech before the Mobile Ala., post. "No man who has not the title of a world war veteran should be permitted a place on the roll of the Legion," he said. "I would give almost anything I have for that title."

Hundreds of ex-gobs who raked mines out of the North Sea during the world war want to re-enlist, but in Prohibition Commissioner Haynes' "hooch navy." Four submarine chasers are being put in commission at Baltimore, Md., and when completed will form a navy that will wag on rum runners.

A discovery that Harvard, Neb., didn't have a way of getting the latest news on the weather, crops and current events, caused an old navy radio operator to get busy. Now the American Legion is issuing "hot off the wire" news to the Harvard citizenry.

"If the Legion wants the flag taken down, they can hire a couple of steeple jacks and take it down," was the answer the board of commissioners made to the Littleton, Colo., American Legion post when it protested the improper care being given the flag on the court house. Nothing loath, a couple of old mast climbers turned the trick.

Their own hero's death from old war wounds has caused a Des Moines family to send a request to the American Legion for an ex-service man for adoption.

Don't Let Your Dollars Fly Up Your Chimney

Spent less for your heat and get more heat for your money by using an

Ideal Universal Hot Blast

The most economically operated Hot Blast Stove ever invented. Burns any kind of fuel, including cheapest grades of soft coal or slack. Produces more heat with less fuel because the

Hot Blast Ring Insures Perfect Combustion

This ring, the very latest invention for perfect coal combustion, circles entire inside of body just above the firepot and spreads over the fuel a sheet of heated air, which, mixed with the smoke and gas becomes combustible and produces the most intense heat ever known from a coal fire.

It burns the smoke and gas that is wasted on other styles of heating stoves, and adds 60% to the heating power of the cheapest kind of coal.

A beautiful stove, heavy, well fitted and durable, and so easy to operate, a child can control it.

Come in and get your COUPON on this Heater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at our Universal Stove and furnace demonstration. No purchase is necessary to get your chance on this heater.

Retail Value $65.00

Each day there will be continuous demonstrations by factory representatives of the merits of the wonderful UNIVERSAL COMBINATION RANGE—the range of Simplicity and Economy. It is the absolute superlative of ranges embodying all the conveniences of a gas range with all the advantages of a coal and wood range while occupying only the space of an ordinary range. Remember the dates.

Watch Saturday's paper for full detail of Universal Stove and furnace demonstration.

On Exhibition Next Week

The famous UNIVERSAL Pipeless Furnace—Asbestos-Insulated—widely known as "The Perfect Pipeless Furnace."

We have just received a shipment of these wonderful heat-makers and fuel-savers. We have a furnace set up in our show room, and will cheerfully explain to you how it gives you more heat with less fuel. How it takes place of stoves or unsatisfactory old-style pipe furnaces. How it gives you a warm house and a cool cellar, saving hundreds of dollars in heat that now is wasted.
