WHAT PROMINENT MEN THINK OF PROHIBITION

The following statements have been made, by men of prominence, showing their stand in regard to the prohibition amendment:

"I can see nothing but permanency for the movement which has wiped out the menace of the saloon. Prohibition has proven itself an economic benefactor in more ways than one."—Ben W. Olcott, governor of Oregon.

"The liquor traffic was destructive of much that was precious in American life. In the fact of so much evidence on that point, what conscientious man would want to let his own selfish desires influence him to vote to bring it back? In another generation, I believe that liquor will have disappeared from our memories."—Warren G. Harding, president of the United States.

INFORMAL LUNCHEON HELD AT HOTEL TODAY

An informal luncheon was held at the Hotel Ashland today by a number of local business men, the guest of honor being M. J. Duryea, head of the organization and service department of the Oregon state chamber of commerce. Mr. Duryea was in Grants Pass yesterday, attending a forum luncheon, and will speak tomorrow at a luncheon of the Medford chamber. He was spending the day between engagements in Ashland. Arrangements had been completed previously for Mr. Duryea to talk before the local chamber of commerce during the month of May and it was not deemed advisable to ask him to speak at this time, as no notice was received that he would be in the city until late yesterday, and it would have been impossible to reach a great number of the members who would probably like to hear what Mr. Duryea has to say.

Mr. Duryea is well known to many people in Ashland, having been connected with the springs water commission as publicity agent at the time the water was piped into the city.

Mice as Travelers. When Robert Burns called a mouse a "wee, sleekit, cow'rin', tim'rous beastie," he was probably not aware that a mouse isn't the frail, helpless little creature it looks to be. According to the discovery of the late David Hutton, of Dumfermline, Scotland, the average mouse travels about ten miles a day. Some mice make real speed records, and cover even more ground than this in 24 hours. Mr. Hutton found. There was one mouse in particular, in his collection, that smashed all the long-distance records in mouse-dom by running 365 miles in 35 days. And all this marathon mouse required to keep him going was a half-penny worth of oatmeal during the entire period.

"Should a physician give his wealthy patients harmless powders when they insist on being treated, although he knows they are quite well, or should he tell them frankly there is nothing the matter with them?" asked the young doctor.

"That depends on the financial status of the physician," said the elderly doctor. "If he has an income sufficient for his needs and is not dependent on his practice for a living he should not only tell such patients there is nothing the matter with them, but if he feels in a facetious mood he can even afford to pooh-pooh their most cherished symptoms."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Pets Provided For by Will.

Cat legates are not peculiar to France. England has had them, and in our own country only a few years ago died the second of two cats, Blackie and Pinkie, that belonged to Benjamin F. Dilley of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Mr. Dilley, at his death, left the income of $40,000 to provide for them as long as they should live, appointed a woman to care for them, and bequeathed her a pension till her death, after which the estate was to be divided, most of it going to charities. Pinkie died first. Blackie followed her two years later at the age of sixteen, which is four years beyond the average life of a cat.
