Kentucky Derby, Famous Racing Classic To Be Run Tomorrow

(By International News Service.) LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 12.—All roads lead to Louisville today! Tomorrow the great Kentucky Derby, the classic of all classics to be decided on the American turf, will be staged at the Latonia race track here before a cheering, colorful throng of men and women who love the "sport of kings." By the trainloads, by automobiles, on horses, in buggies and on foot, they are coming—coming for that thrill that comes only once or twice in a lifetime.

In every hotel lobby, barber shop, soft drink parlor and shoe shining shop, there is but one subject of conversation, and that is the Derby. And, remarkable as it may seem, almost everybody knows, or says he knows, who is going to win. It is apparent that the event is bigger than the town, although the town is doing its supreme best to make everybody happy and as comfortable as possible. True and characteristic Kentucky hospitality prevails. Here in the home of beautiful women, high bred horses and once famous mint-juleps, hospitality is extended to the stranger in a manner that warms the very cockles of the heart. With the hotels and rooming houses crowded beyond capacity private homes are being thrown open to utter strangers. And it all comes from the heart; it is not a commercial movement, or town boosters' proposition—it's just that feeling among the natives that "Tomorrow's Derby Day" and what else matters.

Star and Busy American will carry the white and green colors to at least a place of honor. He hesitates about making any rash predictions. Whitney has several good entries, including the great Broomster. The only note of criticism, now that everything is in readiness for the great spectacle, is directed at the conduct of the management in postponing the Derby event so that it comes on the same day as the Pre-kness. The conflict of attractions, however, seems to have done no particular harm, as interest is as high—if not higher—than in any other of the Derbies which have been run off in this historic spot since Aristides won the event in 1875.

While the Derby is the magnet that has drawn thousands here, those who like the prize ring also will find entertainment. Pal Moore the Chicago bantamweight, and Johnny Buff, the New Jersey "Daddy," who wears the bantamweight crown, will step ten rounds tonight. The scrap is a no-decision affair, but fight fans expect to see lots of action, with Moore trying to take the championship away from Buff by means of a knockout.

Chautauqua Second Day Thursday, May 25th

MARGARET GARRISON WON IN NATIONAL CONTEST

Carried Off First Honors When Pitted Against Country's Best Speakers.

It remained for a titan-haired lady from Sunset Land to be the first woman to win the National Oratorical Contest. This was the accomplishment of Margaret Garrison, reader and impersonator who pitted her golden voice against a continent at Des Moines, Iowa, a year ago. Fifteen hundred speakers took part, representing 250 universities and colleges. Miss Garrison will be heard at Chautauqua on the second afternoon in a miscellaneous program of readings and impersonations. She is pupil of Maurice Browne and other noted dramatic instructors; has taken a prominent part in the Little Theatre movement and is a member of the Portland Playhouse Players. She is a reader of rare dramatic talent.

The campaign drive for the sale of 1500 adult season tickets for the thirtieth annual assembly of the Southern Oregon Chautauqua association will open Monday, May 15, and close at 8 o'clock p. m. Monday, May 22. The price of this adult season ticket is $1.50 paid to the solicitor at the time of purchase. It is an individual ticket and not a family ticket. When at the close of this drive, 1500 tickets have been sold, then automatically there will be a rebate of 50 cents on each ticket when the ticket is presented at the main ticket office and the same will be marked "rebated."

Should the drive for the 1500 fail of securing that amount, then the price of the ticket will remain at $1.50. It is firmly believed by the Chautauqua management that the drive will "go over the top," and that the purchasers of tickets will thus receive the benefit of a highly interesting and entertaining program at a radical price cut. The Chautauqua assembly auditorium seats 4000 people, and it would be a far better advertisement for Ashland to have this space filled at a low price than pay the larger price and have a smaller audience.

The city and adjacent territory was mapped out at a meeting of the ticket committee the first of the week, and carefully selected ticket sellers have been appointed to their respective districts. This will afford a careful combing of the city and no one will escape an opportunity of having the matter presented to them.

BIG DOUBLE ATTRACTION AT VINING THEATER TONIGHT

When Fanny Hurst first took up her pen and started writing her inimitable heart-interest stories, she never dreamed that her true-to-life characters which gained her fame in fiction would some day be immortalized on the screen.

She wrote for the sheer love of writing of life as she saw it, not as a playwright or dramatist, but as a realist. She did not write with the stage or screen as the object of her writing; and so it was a distinct surprise to her when one day she was approached by a producer who had read her story, "Humoresque," and was told that he thought it would make a great screen drama.

He purchased the screen rights and the rest is history. "Humoresque," Fanny Hurst's first tale to be pictured, has gone down in film annals as one of the greatest dramatic productions ever screened. The motion picture "Stardust," suggested by Miss Hurst's powerful novel of the same name and adapted for the screen by Anthony Paul Kelly, is now a finished product with charming Hope Hampton in the starring role. It will be the first National attraction at the Vining theater today and tomorrow.

There will be another screen production, "The Nuisance," as well as the vaudeville bill in which Frank Oldfield and Frankie Drew put on their dainty miniature musical comedy and Violette appears in "Visions d' Art."
