Mother's Day—Tomorrow

By GUY FITCH PHELPS

Yes, I'm homesick for mother today
Tho the grave closed between us not long ago.
There are many tender things I'd like to say,
And I would kiss her hands and temples gray
And stooping down, I'd whisper
deep and low:
'I miss you, mother, O, I miss you so!
And I'm sure the world would surely fall
Upon her heart—Just homesick
that is all.

I'm tired out with the big game of things,
The heat, the rush, the feverish
ways of men;
My brain is tired, I'm sluggish with the stings
Or human scorpions. Oh, to put again
My head upon her knee as I did when
My young heart's wounds unto her love appealing,

Closed their red springs in her soft
touch and healing,
And her dear words: "I understand it all."
Just homesick for mother—that is all.
I've had my little share of praise
and blame;
My hands have not been emptied
all of gold;
A slender spray of myrtle binds my name,
And many of my thoughts have been retold;
And love has filled my breast all it would hold;
I've traveled far by land and oceans
foam,
All tribes my kindred and all spots
my home;
To see you, mother, I'd give it all—
For I'm homesick for you—homesick,
that is all.

And hear you calling through the dusk and dew
Your brood, around you from the cool night air,
And have you tucked me in with kiss
and prayer,
Ah, for that bliss, I'd give Golconda's store
And Montezuma's fabled mine of
yore,
And all the jewels of the Inca's hall
For I'm homesick for you, mother,
that is all.
I part the tangled grass above your tomb
And put my face close down
against the earth;
I break the silence of thy sunless
room,
Where lies so still you, who once
gave me birth,
And taught me honor's ways and heaven's worth.
I call thee and tell thee all I've borne
In life's red school, where each is taught to mourn,
While hot and fast my tears unnum-bered fall—
For I'm homesick for you, mother,
that is all.

AGED MAN DIED FRIDAY EVENING AT THE HOSPITAL

Albert Eske, aged resident of Jackson county, who resided about two miles east of the city, died yesterday evening at the Granite City hospital from chronic Bright's disease.

He has been a resident of this vicinity for the last 12 years. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and children, besides many friends which he has made since coming to Ashland.

In Ashland's Auto Camp

Last evening marked the close of the third week since the opening of the park this season. Considerably over a hundred cars registered, which was more than registered the two weeks previous.

A fine class of tourists are passing through, and it is interesting to listen to their experiences as they are related around the evening camp fire. There are strangers here of different nationalities and religions, who have traveled over a large part of the world, and who represent many different trades. They make up a good cross-section of humanity, and they are all optimists. Anyone afflicted with the blues would do well to visit the camp fire some evening, and if anyone is still doubtful as to the advisability of making a daily charge, you might let these people who pay the bills, speak for themselves.

New additions last evening were: C. G. Hubbard and party, Spokane; Mr. and Mrs. Manchester, Springfield, Or.; F. S. White and family, Los Angeles; O. Clink and family, Great Bend, Kans.; Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Graham, Appleton, Wis.; J. H. Hesch and party, A. V. Landeen and family, San Diego; J. R. Kanob and party, Billings, Mont.; Jess B. Miller and family, Sacramento; G. W. Cleveland, Seattle; John Thorbergsson, Los Angeles.

The republicans burned the British wireless station, seized foodstuffs and commandeered the building for barracks.

FEAR EUROPEAN WAR IF RUSSIA IS FLAUNTED

LLOYD GEORGE SOUNDS NOTE OF WARNING IF FRENCH MAINTAIN ATTITUDE

British Premier's Proposal Based Upon the Russian Note, for a Truce Pending Frontier Re-Alignment Is Rejected by France.

GENOA, May 13.—Warning of the great peril of a new European war was sounded by Lloyd George today, "if the door is closed to Russia." The warning came after the official announcement was made that France would not accept the proposal for a European truce based upon the Russian note of Thursday night.

France takes the stand that even if the truce were put into effect, pending a re-alignment of the European frontiers, the red army would still be a menace to the peace of eastern Europe, unless reduced.

BEST SHOW OF THE YEAR AT THE VINING THEATRE

The show put on at the Vining last night, and which will be repeated tonight, ought to have packed the house to the doors, for it was far and away the best entertainment that has been offered to theater goers in this city for many a day. The vaudeville attraction is a decided novelty, particularly in that it is something so entirely different from the ordinary. Violette in "Visions d'Art," is very properly named, for it is a veritable vision of the artistic blendings of flesh and color, heightened with beautiful electrical effects. A living statue of pulsating beauty, dissolving from one character into another, in a kaleidoscope, at once pleasing to the eye and carrying a compelling appeal to the sense of the beautiful.

Clark Oldfield and Frankie Drew add to the vaudeville bill a pretty bit of musical comedy, interspersed with bright monologue. They crowd into a few moments of entertainment more witty and original hits than could be found in a page of comics in a year. Oldfield, who, by the way, is a cousin of the famous auto racer, Barney Oldfield, and has relatives in this city, renders a bass solo that is truly enjoyable. He possesses the rare combination of a well modulated and musical voice, coupled with a distinctness of enunciation seldom attained by vocalists. Miss Drew's presentation of the "Baseball Fan" is decidedly clever and captured the audience.

The screen production of "Star Dust," from the pen of Fannie Hurst is what might be expected from the authoress of "Humoresque." It does not cover as much ground, perhaps, as the latter, but it is a picture so true to life, in depicting the characters of a little middle west village and portraying the evils of Puritanism in seeking to stifle the buds of genius as a creation of Old Nick, that it carries the auditors into the sanctum of the home and easily transports them to the bright lights of Broadway, with all its delusions and snares, in a tale as well told, its moral as strongly pointed, and as entertainingly carried as in the masterpiece, "Humoresque."

JACKSONVILLE'S TRIBUTE TO ITS "OVERLAND FLYER"

The half a thousand or more new ties recently planted along the Jacksonville-Medford railroad allows the car to run now like it had found wheels instead of square ones. Not much joy is derived from riding on a car that bucks like a wild cayuse and jolts your teeth out. Now it is a real pleasure to ride on this "Overland Flyer."—Jacksonville Post.
