

Robertson Had Nothing On Ball In His Famous Record Game

By W. R. STOKLEY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DETROIT, May 17.—"The only thing I had on the ball was control," declares Charles Robertson, recruit pitcher for Kid Gleason's Chicago White Sox, who finds himself famous as a result of his no-run, no-hit, no-man-to-first game against the slugging Detroit Tigers. And Mr. Robertson, who is 25 years old, doesn't smoke, drink or swear, and who narrowly escaped being a minister, resents to a certain extent the charge made by certain members of the Detroit team that he, by some mysterious process, was camouflaging baseballs by anointing them with crude oil or some other liquid strangely resembling said oil. Not only did he not oil the balls as charged, nor cut or roughen them, as is alleged also, but he had to contend with spheres "emerald" by Pillette, Detroit twirler opposing him on the mound, Robertson asserts. "Always at the beginning of an inning I found the first ball emerald," he stated. "I'm not a crab, although I don't want accusations of an unfounded nature thrown at me."

Hailing the boy as "the world's wonder," "Kid" Gleason, manager of the White Sox, branded the oiled ball accusation as "bunk."

"It's all bunk—the kid got the goat of the Tigers, and they're trying to get his!" avers Gleason.

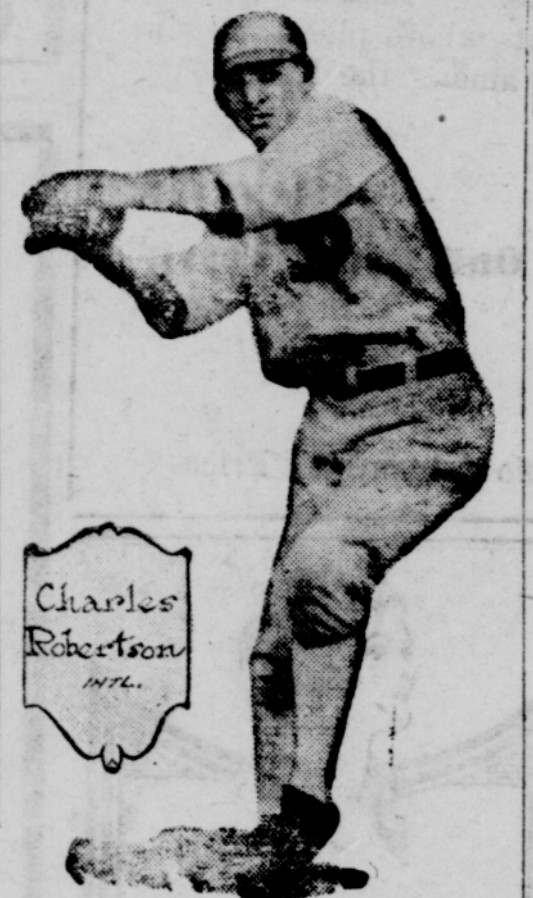

Robertson is Texan
Robertson, who hails from Texas, was studying in Austin college, Sherman, Texas, when the war broke out. Despite the fact that parsons are among the chief crop produced by Austin college, Robertson enlisted in the aviation branch of the service.

After the war closed he went into the oil business for a time. In 1919 a scout of the White Sox, who heard of Robertson's fine record as a college pitcher, induced him to desert the oil game for a fling at major league baseball. Accordingly the youngster went to Chicago, but was farmed out to Minneapolis, of the American association, for a little experience.

"There, during two years of pitching I made a fair record," Robertson said, "enough to bring me back with the White Sox this year."

That his remarkable game against

Charles Robertson
Ty Cobb and his team of maulers was not an accident was asserted by the pitcher, who admits that for a long time he had dreamed of pitching just such a game.

"I had confidence I would do so, but I had not expected to have such good luck so soon," he said.

"Will you be able to repeat your performance?" he was asked.

"I sure shall try," he replied. And if Robertson was "doctoring the pill," as alleged by almost the entire Tiger team, he certainly succeeded in concealing the medicine case, for Robertson's uniform and glove were subjected to a thorough "frisking" by Umpire Evans and such members of the Tiger team as Cobb, Heilman, Blue and Veach, all of whom are, or should be, wise to all tricks of the trade.

CARKIN STANDS ON RECORD FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE

John H. Carkin, candidate for state representative, was born in Maine and is a graduate of the University of North Dakota. For the past 14 years he has been engaged in the practice of law in Medford. He was elected state representative from Jackson county ten years ago, serving in the 1913 session, following E. V. Carter and the late W. I. Vawter. During this session he served on the important ways and means committee. Mr. Carkin is the author of the Oregon budget law under which the state is now operating. At that time there were no national or state budget laws, except New York, thus making Oregon the second state to adopt a budget of its expenditures. Since then the making of a budget has been made compulsory for every school district, city and county of Oregon, and a similar budget law has been adopted by the national government and in many of the states.

In 1918, he was appointed a member of the state consolidation committee by the late Governor Withycombe, advocating the doing away with useless offices.—Paid Adv.
