What Constitutes Advertising
In order to allay a misunderstanding among some as to what constitutes news and what advertising, we print this very simple rule, which is used by newspapers to differentiate between them: "ALL future events, where an admission charge is made or a collection is taken IS ADVERTISING." This applies to organizations and societies of every kind as well as to individuals.

HER AMBITION
She keeps her eyebrows penciled, her lashes curled and waxed;
She dolls up with precision that never is relaxed;

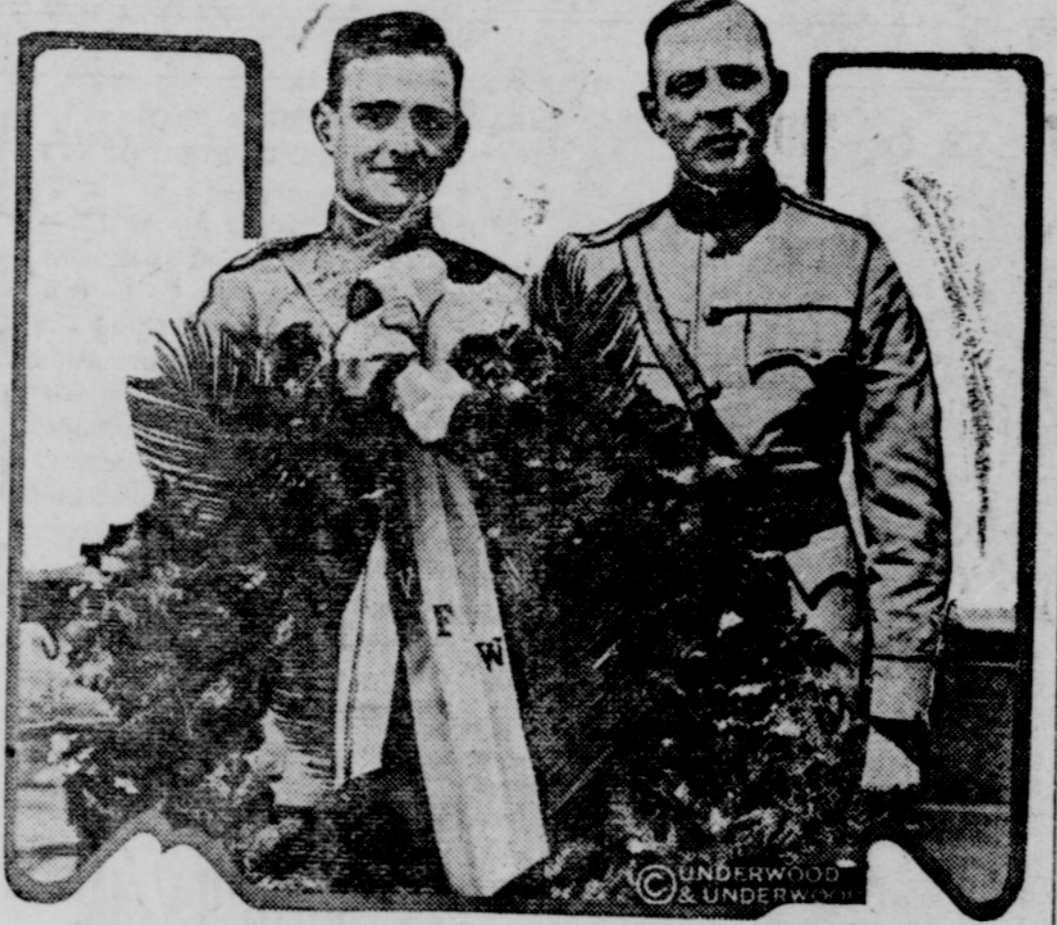

If the senate adopts the cloture rule, Tom Watson, LaFollette, et al., will probably regard it as a personal insult.
The enforcement bureau claims Chicago is practically dry, so what is there in prohibition to recommend it?

Lloyd George entertained William Rankus Hearst, showing that the British premier is a very tolerant and democratic sort of person.
If civilization is on trial, it is to be hoped it is dressed as a woman, and the verdict will be brought in by a male American jury.

Sponsors of the Hague conference, in inviting America, exhibited the same politeness that a man extends to a banker he is about to approach for a loan.
France is now reported willing to reduce German reparations if America will cancel the debts. The report was not necessary. There has never been any doubt.

Western man offers his house, only five years old, for sale, because his family "has outgrown it." And in the west, too, where there is supposed to be lots of room to expand.
The reward of the New Jersey woman who was ducked in a wash-tub by her husband was particularly inappropriate, Congress should give a gold medal to a woman found near a washtub nowadays.

Carry Wreath to France's Unknown Hero

Capt. Reuel W. Elton, adjutant general of the Veterans of Foreign War of the United States, and Capt. Robert S. Cain, aide-de-camp to Commander in Chief Woodside of the veterans, with the wreath which they took to Paris to lay as a Memorial day tribute upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier of France beneath the Arc de Triomphe. The wreath is of poppies, the inter-allied memorial flower.

HALL AND THE RECOUNT

(Oregon Voter)
From authoritative sources, the Voter learns definitely that no announcement concerning a recount demand will be made by Senator Charles Hall until after the official canvass of the primary election returns has been made.
Efforts of certain newspapers to forecast Senator Hall's independent candidacy, at the same time inferring that the recount is certain, are silly. If Hall's state advisory committee of lawyers, which, it is claimed, is still functioning in checking evidence pertaining to the election results, should recommend a recount as the one means available to substantiate what is said to be the sincere belief of his supporters that Hall is the regularly nominated republican candidate for governor, then it is certain that there will be a recount. Announcement to this effect, however, will come in due time from no one but Senator Hall himself.

The absurdity of a premature independent candidacy declaration is evident when it is realized that should a recount confirm alleged irregularities and make Hall, not O'cott, the nominee, then Hall would be an independent candidate against himself as the regular party candidate.

Possibly no great harm is done in flaunting the independent candidate threat at stated intervals by newspapers having a purpose in fanning into motion the political atmosphere. But certain it is that there can be little gained in attempting to place a candidate for nomination for governor in such a ridiculous light.
The forces behind Hall are determined to use every means to get at the facts which they believe exist. In the meantime what else can be done but wait for the official count.—Oregon Voter.

CONCERNS WHOLE PACIFIC COAST

One cannot consider the dissolution of the physical properties of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific as ordered by the United States supreme court, without a feeling of anxiety.

For half a century these properties have been built, developed and operated as one property.

For half a century these properties have grown up together, and their facilities kept in fine adjustment with the industries and needs of the Pacific coast.

This has resulted in the Pacific coast having as good transportation service, both local and interstate, as any part of the country.

No other section of the country requires such a diversity of service. It produces and markets more than half of the fruit and vegetable products of the nation. This requires not only much special equipment, but a well maintained and operated road to insure expeditious movement.

It takes a strong and financially solid railroad to provide such facilities and service.

If these properties be torn apart and made into two railroads; if they be jointly operated, or if they be separated and the Central Pacific operated by itself, increased cost of transportation and impairment of service are alike inevitable.

If separation cannot be avoided, then the thing to do is that which will cause the least harm to the public, or, in other words, joint operation of the Southern and Central properties.

But every effort should first be exhausted to avoid dissolution. Saving intact its one great transportation system—the foundation of its success and hope for future progress and prosperity—is a task and a problem that concerns the whole Pacific coast.

Under the transportation act, the interstate commerce commission has authority to effect a consolidation. To this end every effort should be directed. Success in this respect means more for the people and industries of the Pacific coast than anything else that may be done, or that has been done since the first shovel of earth was turned in constructing these lines.

GOLD HILL IS BECOMING POPULAR WITH TOURISTS

Motoring days are here and the paved road in both directions from Gold Hill are as thick with cars as robins in the trees. The Pacific highway in Oregon is now in splendid condition. Summer paving operations are hindering the fullest enjoyment of motor travel, but this early in the season the detours are not nearly so bad as later, and thousands are taking advantage of this fact to reach their destinations in the north, south or east before the roads are cut up where the travel is shunted off the main highway. With few exceptions the route between here and Portland is a boulevard.

These delays cause no impatience to the Oregonian because it means the completion of the entire paved Pacific highway in Oregon in the near future. In the vicinity of Yoncalla and in the canyon near Canyonville, paving operations will necessarily put travel on time schedules, as detours will be impossible. One very beautiful bridge that will soon be opened to travel is the one at Myrtle Creek. The Willamette river bridge is now under way and when completed will permit the travel to use the west side of the river between Oregon City and Portland, cutting out the roughest piece of pavement in Oregon.—Gold Hill News.

SHRINERS MEET MANY FRIENDS AT DEPOT HERE

Quite a number of local people met friends among the Shriners who passed through the city last week. Among those who met old friends were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Heath of Terrace street, who saw Mesdames Root and Stearns, both of Cleveland. Mr. Root and Mr. Stearns were on the train, but the Heaths failed to find them, so took the ladies for a drive around the city and over the high drive during the hour they spent in the city.

William Paul also met people from his home town of Akron, O., and found they were intimately acquainted with his uncle, Hosea Paul, a retired merchant of that city. The Shriners who Mr. Paul met were C. H. Stahl, attorney, and Harry Howell, banker, both belonging to Al Koran temple of Cleveland.

THOROUGHbred PIGS SOLD TO HORNbrook STOCKMAN

W. L. Moore, of the Bellevue district, who combines orcharding with the raising of thoroughbred Poland-China pigs, has sold a number of his fancy hogs to Marshall Horn, a well known stockman, of Hornbrook, Calif. Mr. Horn already had a large number of fine hogs, but being always on the alert to better his stock, he decided to buy some of the best hogs he could find, and located them in Ashland.

'WEED' GROWN IN MANY LANDS

Almost Every Country in the World Has Made at Least an Attempt to Cultivate Tobacco.

Some old English chronicles show that the early cultivation of tobacco in England was attended with strange results. In 1655 the county hangerman of Gloucestershire complained that men were so busy growing tobacco that they neither had time nor inclination for sheep stealing. The opposition of the royal Stuarts to tobacco raising in England is said to have been "for revenue only." It has been written that Charles II "prohibited, in order to maintain the revenue from its import duties, the cultivation of tobacco in England and Ireland under a fine of 40 shillings for every rood planted with the herb, except in any physic garden for either university or in any private garden for physick or chirurgery." In 1684 the penalty was increased to 10 pounds sterling per rood.

It is not generally known that tobacco is grown in nearly every country in the world—England, Ireland, France, Switzerland, Spain, Italy, China, Japan, Uruguay, Argentina, Java, and so on throughout the world except in the extreme northern and southern latitudes where the temperature is too low. There have been various efforts during the last ten years to revive interest in the cultivation of tobacco in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland.

MADE TOP FLOOR DO WORK

Ingenuous but Forgetful Young Man Drafted Door Opener Into Service and Escaped Reprimand.

Having on the third successive day forgotten to take the front-door key with him a young man living in one of the rooms of a first-floor apartment, stood in the outer vestibule wondering how he could get in without letting his landlady know of his latest negligence.

Unlocking the front door was a simple matter for anyone in the apartment, since all one had to do was press a button, but unfortunately, the button was at the front of the apartment and usually when the young roomer arrived, which was about supper time, his landlady was engaged in the kitchen at the other end of her domicile. Suddenly an idea came to him. Glancing over the rows of mail boxes on the wall at his side, he chose a button above one of them belonging to a top-floor apartment.

He pressed the button and waited—no response. Then he pressed another button and a moment later heard the click of the electric lock release. Stepping inside he was soon at the door of his apartment, which he opened with his other key, while the person who unlocked the downstairs front door wondered why the supposed visitor did not appear, says the New York Sun.

Oldtime Football.

Football may be a rough game, but it is quite gentle and harmless now compared to what it used to be. Way back in the Eighteenth century when the sport was in its swaddling clothes the type of ball used was not so kind to the feet of the one who kicked it. Eighteenth-century footballs were made of straw which was braided until a long rope was obtained. This was then wound and coiled into the shape desired. The finishing touch was to knock it around in water until it became hard and unyielding.

When the leather ball finally replaced the old straw model, it was stuffed with horse hair until it became hard and solid. The leather ball was at first scoffed at by the old timers who had played the game when straw balls were in vogue. Even when stuffed with hair, the leather ball was regarded as a toy for weaklings who were afraid of injuring their feet. The parents of that age had more cause to complain about the roughness of the game than have those of today, whose sons kick inflated pigskin instead of solid balls of straw.

Surely a Genius.

A man in a small town had a son who returned home from dental college and opened an office for practice. At the end of a week the neighbors told one another that "practice" was indeed the proper word; and one of them even went so far as to suggest to the young dentist's fond father that a man should be of a mechanical turn of mind in order to be a successful dentist.

"Why," exclaimed the father, "Jim is a genius! One day last summer I sent him to cultivate the orchard, and a cultivator tooth caught under a root, whereupon the boy took his pocket knife and tried to cut the root off. But finding it slow work, he hammered his knife into the root with a rock until he broke the blade. Then a bright thought came to him. Getting a club, he whipped the mules until the cultivator broke and he was free."—Youth's Companion.

Fear of Old Ideals.

The future is a blank on which every man can write his own name as large as he likes; the past I find already covered with illegible scribbles, such as Plato, Isalah, Shakespeare, Michael Angelo, Napoleon. I can make the future as narrow as my self; the past is obliged to be as broad and turbulent as humanity, and the upshot of this modern attitude is really this: That men invent new ideals because they dare not attempt old ideals. They look forward with enthusiasm, because they are afraid to look back.—G. K. Chesterton.

.DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

- THAT the city that gets the publicity gets the business.
THAT the city that gets the advertising grows.
THAT advertising a city is a business; not child's play.
THAT people will go miles to get to a good live city to trade.
THAT your property will increase in value when the outside world knows your city is wide awake.
THAT people from neighboring cities will come where there is something doing.
THAT the city which does not seek something better than it now has, is going to lose out.
THAT now is the time your city and business need advertising more than ever before.
THAT if you don't get out and go after the outside business, some neighboring city will.
THAT if they do, they will get the business you should get.

GAINS 33 LBS. AND YEARS OF SUFFERING END

Mrs. C. B. Rowland Says Tanalac Is Just Grand—Distressing Case of Stomach Trouble Entirely Overcome.

"Tanalac actually increased my weight 33 pounds and gave me relief from trouble that made me miserable for years," said Mrs. C. B. Rowland, 344 Eugene street, Portland, Oregon.
>About 14 years ago I began to have trouble with my stomach. Then about 18 months ago I had the 'flu' which left me as weak as I could be. I couldn't eat anything scarcely and the little I did manage to force down formed as which bloated me up terribly and made my heart palpitate until I nearly smothered. My nerves were so wretched that any noise like the children playing around the house nearly drove me distracted.
But I had hardly started on Tanlac before I was feeling better, and now it has brought me out until I haven't a trace of my old troubles left. My husband has also taken Tanalac for his stomach trouble and it has helped him wonderfully. Tanalac is truly the grandest medicine I have ever found."

Tanalac is sold by all good druggists.

SAWMILL NEAR GOLD HILL CHANGES HANDS

The Herman Brothers sawmill at the forks of Sardine creek, built and put into operation about the middle of March, has changed hands. After the fatal accident resulting in the death of Charlie Herman's little girl by burning, the bereaved parents could not stay at the scene of the fatality, and the mill was offered for sale to R. W. Dusenberry, who took full possession Thursday. The mill is in full operation under the management of Mr. Dusenberry, who is employing three men in the mill. The lumber cut is estimated at present at about 3000 feet per day. The timber is all right at the mill, and the overhead expense is very low. Rough lumber only is cut. The market is strong and the future of the mill looks very good.—Gold Hill News.
