PROGRESS MADE IN AVIATION

Records Show That the United States Is More Than Holding Its Own in Aerial Travel.

During the year 1921 the use of aircraft for civilian transportation increased 20 per cent over the previous year, according to a report forwarded to the Department of Commerce by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America.

The reports show that throughout the country 1,200 civilian airplanes were in operation during the year, and they carried approximately 275,000 passengers a total distance of 6,500,000 miles. These figures, according to the report, are based upon authenticated returns received by the aeronautical chamber from all sections of the country.

LAND ADAPTED FOR REINDEER Northern Canada, It is Estimated, Could Support Enormous Herds of Good Food Cattle.

Canada is a roomy land, and its back region can never be used for agricultural purposes and where neither sheep nor cattle can be raised profitably, comprises about 1,500,000 square miles.

William Stefauson, the Canadian explorer, who has been trying to convert his countrymen to reindeer culture for several years and has given the subject a great deal of study, thinks that the Canadian mainland, north of the so-called habitable line, and the great Canadian archipelago can support 50,000,000 reindeer and musk-ox, another sub-Arctic animal which he thinks may in the near future furnish the world with an appreciable supply of good, wholesome meat.—John G. Holme in Leslie's Weekly.

Mirror in Man's Hat.

A man can manage somehow to get along without a powder rag, but there are occasions when he does need a mirror and a comb for emergency use. To meet this demand, Gustav Peszernack, of Trenton, N. J., has contrived a holder for both articles which may be conveniently fastened inside of a hat. It is seen in, being made of cloth, a rectangular piece of which is attached to the inside of the hat by snap fasteners at the corners.

Woman in Finland.

Woman in Finland enjoys almost equal rights with the man. In school she has, in the common instruction with the male youth, opportunity to contend with them and to acquire the same knowledge. After completing the school education almost all vocations are open to her, and she is found in all branches of industry, but especially in business houses, in public offices and similar institutions.

Ambassador of the Air.

For some time France has had a new diplomatic function, that of ambassador of the air. And for that delicate function, for which not every one is fit, a woman, Mlle. Adrienne Bolland, has been nominated. This intrepid aviatrix was the first, it will be remembered, who flew over the Cordilleras of the Andes. This feat made her famous in South America.

MUST LET THE WORLD KNOW

Too Many Expect Others to Be Conversant With Their Secret Hopes and Aspirations.

The rarest person in the world is the one who knows what he really wants. And if you don't know yourself, how can you expect others to know?

If independence, freedom and an adventurous life are what you really want, don't expect people to deduce it from the fact that you are married and have several small children.

If you are a professional person, and have decided early in your career that you must make money above all things, don't be hurt and surprised when you are forty if you are not widely known as a distinguished scientific expert.

Now you are dismayed that it did not see into your heart and understand what it was that you really wanted. Too many gentle souls pin their faith on the old idea that the world will sooner or later beat a path to their doors.—Marion McLean, in The Designer.

ADAM AND EVE GO SHOPPING

Highly Imaginative Picture of Our First Parents Strolling Through a Department Store.

Let us imagine our scapegoat ancestors attempting an 11 o'clock stroll through a ten-story department store. Ellen Burns Sherman writes in the North American Review.

Can we not bear the tense ejaculations of our first mother before the mountains of unknown things, wools, satins, silks, challies, organdies and muslins, piled ceiling-high before her? Even Adam, who has a reputation as a namer of things, might well drop all his Miltonic airs of superiority, and say for once in some dainty form of Edenic language, "Eve, dear, I certainly am out of soundings. I can find names easily enough for birds, beasts and fishes, but all this" (with a gesture of meek hopelessness) "is out of my zone. Yet I am sure it is all intended for your sex; for I'm thinking no man would gear himself up in any of this duff"—if one may help him to a word.

Differ Concerning Apparition.

An apparition in dazzling white appeared above the altar at Belmont abbey, according to priests of the Benedictine order at the monastery attached to Belmont abbey. One of the priests was kneeling before the high altar when the apparition appeared and he called some of his colleagues, who are also reported to have seen the apparition.
