The Flapper Dollar. Already the critics—call them by pers, if you like—are knocking out the silver coin. One writer calls it the "flapper dollar" and says the open lipped girl thereupon looks as though she might be saying "Line's bizzy" or "Say, itssen!" Just that sort of girl, you know. If the comment were not so obvious we would say something about money talking—but we refrain.—Boston Transcript.

Wolverine Always a Pest. The wolverine is found all around the world, but most commonly north of the fiftieth parallel of latitude. It is as common in Siberia as it is in northern Canada. It is a notorious feeder upon carrion, and is a thief. It robs traps of mink, skunk and other fur-bearing animals, and eats them ravenously. It will follow up a trapper's line of traps, spring them cunningly without being caught, and then eat the bait. It will gnaw through the side of a log house to get at the settler's store of food, and it is almost impossible to make a cache of food inaccessible to the wolverine's powerful teeth and claws.

WAISTCOAT ADDS TO SUIT Accessories Are Used Alike on Formal and Informal Costumes—Cotton Homespun Neckwear.

Spring is to see the waistcoat or gilet established as an essential accessory to the smart suit costume. This is the only conclusion one can reach after viewing a number of spring neckwear lines, which are now opening fast, and which are of exceptional interest.

The neckwear trade is talking sport neckwear strongly, and consequently is showing fabrics of appropriate weave and in exceedingly smart color effects. What promises to be one of the successful fabrics of the season for this purpose is "cotton homespun," which comes in plain colors and in good looking stripes, and is smartest when severely mannish, or decorated with hand drawn work.

Some embroidery in colors is used as well. New models in this material have been brought out. One has a characteristic roll sport collar and pockets in the turned up bottom. A collarless model, with hand drawn revers at the front, is effectively worn with a coat having a black collar.

There are mannish waistcoats in this same material, collarless and pocketed, in narrowly striped homespun. There are many Puritan collarless gilets in the spring collection, and the materials and colors in which they, as well as other models, are being shown are innumerable.
