MUMMIFIED BODIES IN CAVES

Scientists Expect to Find Much of In- terest Through Discoveries in South Africa.

Recently discovered mummy caves in the Koster district, west of Pretoria, South Africa, are situated in a wild country 25 miles from railways, and the entrance to them lies at the bot- tom of a forbidding hole in the ground 60 feet deep, for the descent of which a rope tied to a tree trunk is neces- sary.

Several hours spent in the caves failed to give any estimate of their size, as passages extend for long dis- tances, possibly for miles. The work of exploration was not without danger on account of the pitch darkness, the jagged rocks, and the risk of falling into crevices.

The explorers saw in a fissure high up in a rock on the side of the cave the mummified body of a huge buck, on top of which, also wedged in the rocks, was the body of a large tiger with its jaws fiercely extended. Two members of the party attempted to get the horns of the buck, but a fall of rock compelled them to abandon the effort. Under the bats' dung which covered the floor of the cave were found the mummified remains of a monkey meas- uring six feet from head to toe, in an excellent state of preservation. On the floors were a large number of bones and chipped flints, while the bats' dung looked as though it had been accumulated for centuries.

GRANT INTERCEDED FOR LEE

Writer in Detroit Newspaper Makes Public Fragment of History That Is Interesting Reading.

Immediately after the conclusion of the Civil war and the assassination of President Lincoln, Andrew Johnson, the new President, became very in- tent on the punishment of the South, rather than his predecessor's gener- ous idea of treating the war as definitely at an end and concentrat- ing national effort on the upbuilding of the Union. He found many sup- porters in congress, and their endorse- ment persuaded him to contemplate a very radical course. On one occasion he meditated the arrest of General Lee.

When the news of this plan came to General Grant, he immediately waited on President Johnson and informed him that Lee had honorably surrendered, and had been assured that he could devote himself to the welfare of the South without inter- ruption or disturbance. The North- ern general continued to the effect that the army, of which he was head, intended to see that these terms were carried out, and that if Johnson at- tempted to interfere with Lee he would be arrested himself. This was the end of Johnson's designs on the liberty of the Southern commander.— Detroit News.

Hibernian Hyperbole.

In one of our New England sum- mer resorts lives, during the summer, a family having four small children of assorted sizes, and several dogs. In the employ of the household is an Irish maid whose duties include keep- ing the living rooms of the house in order. Early in the season the streets of the village are treated to a coat of tar, a proceeding attended by much tracking about of the dogs. Nora's dis- tress of mind, after one of these ex- periences, is great, for she is a clean- ly soul who has the appearance of her domain much at heart. When the un- tidiness was at its worst one day she went in search of her mistress and complained:

"I give you me word, Mrs. Brown, that fer ivery wanst the boys and thim dogs has gone out of this house this day they've come in twenty-five times!"

Made Famous Tea Shipment.

In Gracechurch lane, an obscure byway just outside one of London's busiest commercial centers, American tourists may see over a grocer's store the "sign of the crown and three gilt sugar loaves" that marks the location of the shop whence the tea was shipped in 1773 that ultimately went overboard in Boston harbor during the world's famous tea party.

Only the sign, which was recently restored and which bears in big gold numerals "1750," the year the firm was established, is suggestive of re- mote times.

The grocer's shop, conducted by de- scendants of the firm's founders, over which the sign hangs, is now housed

OLYMPIC

"You cannot tell by the appearance of a frog how far he can jump." To the inexperienced poultry raiser, OLYMPIC Mashers look coarse and rough. This is a mechanical condition that we maintain in milling, as it influences palatability and digestibility materially. This friable mash allows the hens to eat it readily and is never pasty; also, the digestive fluids are able to work on the loose mass more efficiently, thus insuring higher digestibility. This is one thing, together with the superior quality of ingredients of the mashers that makes it possible for OLYMPIC Egg Mashers to produce better and more uniform results. There is not surplus of unavailable protein to overtax or poison.
