Makers of "Canned Music" Suffer "from Horn Shyness"

REINALD WERRENRATH

Werrenrath, Famous Phonograph Artist, Reveals Secrets of the Wax

This is to explain why you may sometimes have been surprised to find that certain popular singers never make phonograph records. They don't because they can't and they can't because they haven't phonograph voices.

A phonograph voice is one that will record well, but what makes it do this is as much a mystery now as it was in the early days of cylinder graphophones, when all poor records were regarded as the result of mechanical errors.

The "Perfect Recorder" Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, whose records sell in greater numbers than those of any living singer except John McCormack, is regarded in the great laboratory where his tests are made as an almost perfect "recorder," but even he shakes his head when you ask him how it's done, though he's been recording since he started his musical career as a choir boy.

"What goes into the horn, comes out," he explains, "and every suggestion of forcing, every slight off-shade pitch, all stringency or tightness, as well as falsetto or other cheating process shows up in the wax.

"You must sing naturally, though sometimes as I must, a little more softly or with less breath, than for the stage.

"When I made 'Tell Me Daisy', the Schubert-Romberg song from 'Blossom Time', however, I stood right in front of the horn without needing to move from side to side. But these things depend upon the individual voice.

Caruso's Voice Powerful The voice of Enrico Caruso was so enormous in volume that he was always forced to stand at least six feet away from the horn and sometimes when taking a high or loud tone, he had to go back as much as twenty feet to avoid blasting, the wax.

"Another interesting and inexplicable fact is that it is sometimes possible for a soprano and a baritone to use the same horn while two tenors or two baritones may find it necessary to use entirely different instruments.

"Still another quirk in the recording game is the 'horn-shyness' which always overcomes the beginner, no matter how experienced he may be in facing vast audiences. Perhaps this unaccountable fear of a metal horn is really his knowledge that what goes into it, as I said, will always come out, and without any ameliorating circumstances, either."

Damascening Art Revived. To the father of Zuluaga, the Spanish painter, the world is indebted for the revival of the Moorish art of damascening, according to an article in Conquest, a British magazine of popular science.

Senior Zuluaga himself made many fine pieces and inspired other workers in this beautiful craft. "Toledo damascening," as it is often called, is a process of incrusting gold upon steel. Fine lines are cut upon a blackened steel plate, and into these lines thin gold wire is beaten with pointed tools.

The shining gold produces a brilliant effect against the background of dark steel, and when skillfully wrought into the flowers, beasts, birds, and scrolls in which the Spanish artist delights, the result is said to be extremely beautiful, and examples of the ware are highly prized by collectors.—From the Outlook.

ASOP'S FILM Fables THE WICKED CAT

A Wicked Cat once thought it nice To grab for fish beneath the ice; He seized a big one by the fin The fish then dived, the Cat fell in.

A rooster saved the Cat from wreck. The Cat remarked, "I'll wring your neck!" The rooster cried, "Ungrateful cat!" —And beat his block off, after that.

Moral?—Well, I would write it down, "When cats are drowning—let 'em drown!" —Esop, Jr.

SNAKES HAVE LARGE 'LITTERS'

Boa Constrictor, in Captivity, Gave Birth to Sixty-Four Living Young —Others Prolific.

The sixteen-foot Trinidad anaconda, or water boa, at the London Zoological gardens, not long ago gave birth to twenty-four young ones. The newborn snakes were twenty-six inches long and about an inch in diameter at the thickest part of the body.

That number of young had been exceeded by a seventeen-foot snake at the New York Zoological park, which produced thirty-four young. Still another anaconda has been known to produce thirty-seven at a birth, and a large specimen of boa constrictor gave birth to sixty-four living young. The pythons differ from the boas in that they lay eggs and coil around a heap of them until they hatch.

Roosevelt a Bird Lover. Roosevelt's first appearance in the editorial columns of a New York newspaper was probably that in the Evening Post of February 25, 1878. Roosevelt was then a sophomore at Harvard, eighteen years old. The Evening Post devoted a long editorial to the question whether the English sparrow had been a benefit or a pest.

Diamond Rivers. The geological formation of the famous diamond region in the state of Bahia, Brazil, shows that at some time in the history of the world the mountains there were thrown up by a hot mass and the carbon in the stone crystallized into gems. It was, in effect, an electric furnace on a gigantic scale.

Exercise for Blood Pressure. Certain vigorous exercises are distinctly beneficial in most cases of too high blood pressure. At a recent meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine Dr. C. Ward Crampton described his favorite treatment of this trouble, which included regime exercise.

In advanced cases the exercise should be milder. Of course, exercise is only a part of the general treatment, and there are many cases in which it should not be given, especially those in which the heart and kidneys are seriously involved.

HELP WANTED MEN WANTED for service as railroad machinists, boiler-makers, blacksmiths, electricians, sheetmetal workers, pipe fitters, copper-smiths, tinners, car inspectors, car repairers, helpers—all classes

UNDER STRIKE CONDITIONS BEST EXPLAINED BY CHAIRMAN BEN W. HOOPER OF THE UNITED STATES RAILROAD LABOR BOARD IN HIS STATEMENT OF JULY 1ST, READING AS FOLLOWS

"In this case the conflict is not between the employer and the oppressed employees. The people of this country, through an act of congress, signed by President Wilson, established a tribunal to decide such disputes over wages and working conditions, which are submitted to it in a proper manner. It is the decision of this tribunal against which the shop crafts are striking."

"Regardless of any question of the right of the men to strike, the men who take the strikers' places are merely accepting the wages and working conditions prescribed by a government tribunal and are performing a public service. They are not accepting the wages and working conditions which an employer is trying to impose. For this reason public sentiment and full government power will protect the men who remain in their positions and new men who may come in."

Adequate provisions have been made for the full protection of a new employee, the same as old employees who have remained loyally at work. Applicants should apply to the office of the superintendent at Portland (Union station), or to the assistant superintendent at Roseburg.
