 Advertising for fraternal orders or societies charging a regular initiation fee and dues, no discount. Religious and benevolent orders will be charged the regular rate for all advertising when an admission or other charge is made.

What Constitutes Advertising
 In order to allay a misunderstanding among some as to what constitutes news and what advertising, we print this very simple rule, which is used by newspapers to differentiate between them: "ALL future events, where an admission charge is made or a collection is taken is ADVERTISING." This applies to organizations and societies of every kind as well as to individuals.

All reports of such activities after they have occurred is news. All coming social or organization meetings of societies where no money contribution is solicited, initiation charged, or collection taken is NEWS.

World. At the head of Antelope valley, on the Dead Indian, and across from Old Grizzly, there is almost a solid mountain of oil-producing shale, which the syndicate has under lease from the government. The claims made for the Hartman retort, which was demonstrated on a small scale yesterday, would indicate that a problem which has puzzled scientists for years has been solved. It has long been known that shale contained a large percentage of oil. Every machine thus far invented for its extraction has proved so costly in its operation as to make it impracticable. For the Hartman retort, it is claimed that the oil can be extracted at an approximate cost of 40 cents a barrel. As the Standard Oil company pays from two to three dollars a barrel at the well, there seems to be margin enough for a big profit.

STRIKING SHOPMEN FOUND NOT GUILTY

B. F. Montgomery, F. J. Feigh and Russell Miller, the three striking Southern Pacific employees who were arrested last week, charged with carrying concealed weapons, as announced in the Tidings, appeared in Justice Taylor's court at Medford last Friday, to answer to the charge preferred by one of the Southern Pacific strikebreakers, who answered to the name of Victor Q. Potter.

Potter stated that the defendants had visited him at his camp near Jackson Hot Springs on August 2, and tried to induce him to quit "scabbing" on the men who were out on strike. He further stated that two of the defendants pulled revolvers from their hip pockets when he, Potter, showed a belligerent attitude toward B. F. Montgomery, who had been acting as spokesman in trying to persuade him to quit his job.

The defendants, who took the stand in their own defense, did not deny having made the trip to the camp for the purpose of intimidating Potter, but testified that not one of them had a gun. They also refuted Potter's testimony that, when action seemed apparent that he had gone to his own tent and secured his gun, by saying that no such action had taken place, and that even Potter had no gun. Several nearby campers, who were present when the argument took place, testified for the defense.

The plaintiff stated that he had been prompted to take action he had by the advice of Trainmaster McCarty of the Southern Pacific.

County Attorney Moore handled the case for the plaintiff, while Attorney Farrell appeared for the defendants.

A similar charge had also been filed against W. J. Stephens, also a striking shopman, but the complaint was thrown out when Stephens produced witnesses and proved an alibi.

WALTHALL ENTERED THE MOVIES BY AN INCIDENT

Henry B. Walthall's entry into pictures was through the persuasion rather than the invitation of D. W. Griffith. He met the director while he was visiting James Kirkwood at the old Biograph Studio, and had consented to play in a picture then being made and was on his way to the location before he fully realized that he had dropped from the stage to moving pictures—a shameful thing at that time. Mr. Walthall has already created several screen characters that will live forever, but it is said that he does the greatest work of his entire career in "One Clear Call," the John M. Stahl-First National attraction now running at the Vining theatre.
