Movieland Notes

Hal Roach studios are facing a problem, for due to arrive at any hour are 20 white mice for which quarters are in readiness at the zoo. Since the zoo's population is growing by leaps and bounds, names are becoming as scarce as snow shoes at the equator. Jean Havez' suggestion that the mice be named after mythological personages is likely to be acted upon. He sees great value in such names as "Aphrodite," "Hercules," "Apollo," "Narcissus," etc., to place the mice strongly in the public's favor.

Bob McGowan has inaugurated work on the fifth of the "Our Gang" series, through which Mr. Roach hopes to prove that there is a big public demand for comedies featuring children with trained animals. Tom Crizer is now cutting the fourth of the series, and it will be in readiness for shipment to Pathe in New York before the end of the week.

Paul Parrot has been making satisfactory progress in his new Hal Roach comedies. The originality of stories has won hearty approval. J. A. Howe has just finished a timely comedy in which Parrot becomes involved with camels, radio and Arabs. Jim Davis has written the story for the new Parrot picture, in addition to directing it, in which the characters will be of the "moonshiner" type, although Davis guarantees there will not be a "still" in the entire thousand feet.

Peaches were rotting on the ground, they said, while in Chicago they were selling for from $2.50 to $5 a bushel. Farmers were hauling fancy peaches to Benton Harbor and getting 50 to 75 cents, in some instances $1 a bushel—or hauling them back to rot in the fields.

LABOR DAY

Every nation, every section, every sect and every individual has a day set aside in the calendar which is held dear in memory for some event or in observance of some occasion.

Throughout the entire world all Christians treasure the advent of the birth of Christ, and on that day commemorate Him with Christmas. Recognizing the hand of providence that has safely seen the nation through its trials and tribulations, Thanksgiving is held. The Fourth of July reminds us that on that day we obtained our freedom from the bonds placed upon us by England.

Monday should mean more than a day set aside for merriment or vacation; a holiday whereon all toils cease. It is a day consecrated to the holiness of human toil and to the achievements of the producing classes.

To produce is to create, whether that product comes from the fields or the city, from the hand of man, or from the brain, trained or untrained. The underlying principles remain the same.

The essential of Labor Day is the recognition of the universal bond that unites all forms of labor.

Portland is greatly cheered by the information that the recent showers would terminate by Sunday or Monday. We had not learned that the hops had all been harvested. It always rains during the picking season.

MORE CUCUMBERS

Gus Newbury, the genial Medford attorney, is indignant over the Willamette valley claims to large "cukes." He writes to the Oregonian—

Medford, Or., Aug. 30.—(To the Editor.)—It appears that a number of amateurs throughout the Willamette valley have been straining themselves to raise cucumbers and have told through the columns of the Oregonian about the extraordinary size attained by these cucumbers. We in southern Oregon have no doubt of the proportions which these cucumbers have developed in the Willamette valley, but certainly the proportions are extraordinary for the Willamette valley, but in southern Oregon, where we raise the best of grains, fruits, vegetables and everything else, we also raise cucumbers.

To these pride-stricken producers of your valley I want to call attention to the fact that in Medford, Mrs. Sylvia Terrill, an unassuming amateur gardener, has raised some real cucumbers. One of these measures 17 1/2 inches in length by 13 inches in circumference, and weighs 4 1/2 pounds; then she also has a miniature specimen that is 13 inches in length and 12 inches in circumference.

Mrs. Terrill states that next year she contemplates raising some real cucumbers. We respectfully invite the ambi-

WORK IS PROMISED ON REDDING-ALTURAS ROAD

REDDING, Calif., Sept. 2.—Most of the 27 delegates from Alturas, Big Valley, Fall River valley and Redding, who went before the state highway commission in Sacramento returned here yesterday, well satisfied.

They asked that the commission take steps to put the Montgomery Creek-Burney unit of the Redding-Alturas lateral in such a condition that it can be kept open for travel all winter.

"We got what we asked for," said J. H. Creighton, of Fall River valley. "The commission treated us handsomely and promised to do everything we asked, as far as lay in their power."

The highway grading will be completed to Burney or nearly so. The road over Hatchet Creek mountain will be graveled from the Fuller place on this side to the top of the mountain and as far as possible on the Burney side. The Pacific Gas and Electric and the county will each furnish a rock crusher and such other equipment as may be needed that is available. This road over Hatchet Creek mountain is the only trans-Sierra road that is possible to keep open during the winter.
