15,000 VISITED JACKSON FAIR ON SECOND DAY

ONLY EXCELLED BY STATE EXPOSITION IS CURRENT OPINION

WOMEN'S BUILDING POINT OF INTEREST

Nearly All of Fair Sex Visit Displays; Local Man Takes First in Automobile Races; Other Track Events Please Crowd.

"The biggest fair ever held in Oregon, outside of the state fair," is the way officials of the fair association put it yesterday.

With the second day's attendance estimated at between 12,000 and 15,000, and with some 3500 automobiles having passed in through the gates during the morning and early afternoon, the fair grounds took on the appearance of an old established fair, and did not in the least resemble an infant in its first long clothes.

Farmers and citizens from every section of the country and several from adjoining counties were on the ground to take in the fair and "see what was there."

Judging of several of the exhibits were under way and many blue, red and white ribbons were being displayed by the winners in the various contests.

The Women's building was a point of interest to practically every woman on the grounds apparently, for it was thronged all day with women looking over the wonderful pieces of hand work on exhibition. The room in which they were displayed was entirely inadequate to show the larger pieces to any advantage, as there were sufficient articles to cover at least double the space allowed. In addition to the fancy work, there were several household labor saving devices on exhibition in this building that were both interesting and novel, and the attendant was kept busy explaining the many articles.

The building in which the farm and ranch machinery, together with the mineral and forestry products were housed, was another place that was the center of attraction for a large number of the fair visitors.

The horticulture building and the fancy stock quarters were the mecca of the specialists along each of these lines, as well as the admirers of fine things.

The amphitheatre was filled to capacity at 2 o'clock, the hour for the races to start, while many were left on the outside that would have liked the chance to sit down for the track events.

Following is a summary of the races:

The first horse race was three-eighths mile, and was won by "Nick Carter" in 26 1/4 seconds, "Messenger Boy" taking second and "Moonlight" third.

The second race was a half mile run, and was won by "Hattie Stover" in 53 seconds, while "Bridal Veil" and "Grand Neath" won second and third places respectively.

The third race was for five-eighths mile, with three entries, but after having tried to get all three horses off together, until the starters' patience was exhausted, a start was made with two of the horses, while "Clenbercha," the third one, was left at the pole. "Soon" won the race, with "Joe Neath" in second place.

The most interesting horse race of the afternoon was the relay race of a mile and three-quarters between the Murphy and Holbrook strings, with two changes of mount. Murphy's horses won the race in three minutes and 56 seconds, with the Holbrook horse only two-fifths of a second behind.

Motorcycle polo furnished 15 minutes of amusement to the occupants of the grandstand during the afternoon, and caused no little comment as to the wonderful manner in which the players were able to handle their machines without any apparent exertion.

The professional motorcycle race of four and one-half miles was won by Moran on an Indian in four minutes.

ASHLAND DESERTED AS GENERAL EXODUS TO FAIR IS MADE

Locked doors, drawn shades and a few stragglers on the streets was Ashland this noon, following a general emigration to the Jackson county fair for the afternoon races and Ashland Day. Practically all of the automobiles seen were pointed north on the Pacific highway, a majority of them loaded to capacity. The city was truly a "deserted village."

ESPEE REFUSES TO DEAL SEPARATELY WITH SHOP CRAFTS

PORTLAND, Sept. 15.—First definite word given out by the Southern Pacific railroad company regarding the system's participation in the separate settlement of the strike conference between some of the railroads and representatives of the shopcrafts at Chicago Wednesday was given yesterday by J. H. Dyer, general manager of the Southern Pacific.

"We did not participate in this conference and are not concerned in what it did," declared Mr. Dyer. "We have had no dealings with our old shop organizations or its representatives since they went on strike against the decision of the United States railroad labor board and quit the service of this company July 1. Neither do we intend to."

"Those who refused to strike, and those who entered our service as new men have the assurance of the management of protection in their rights, privileges and seniority. Those still on strike who have not been guilty of inciting disorder or committing known acts of violence may to the extent that they are needed, enter our service as new men."

"In accordance with resolutions passed by the labor board, Southern Pacific shop crafts have organized the Shopcrafts Protective League, have appointed committees and the organization now numbers about 85 per cent of the eligible membership. The company has entered into contractual relations with this new organization and our relations and dealings in this respect are now with this new organization."

FOOTBALL STARTS AT ASHLAND HIGH WITH 2 TEAMS OUT

Football aspirants of the Ashland high school are hard at work every night on the athletic field back of the school grounds preparing for a heavy schedule of games this season. Though at present there are but two games assured, with Medford and Grants Pass, it is the expectation of the team to play at least seven games. Sufficient men for two complete teams are appearing in moleskins each afternoon.

Veterans in the line-up are few, practically all of the seasoned men having graduated or failed to return to school this fall. W. R. Hughes, coach, does not commit himself about prospects, and merely contents himself with stating that he has much green material of a promising nature to work on, and he is well satisfied with the way his men are reporting for practice. The outlook for another winning eleven is far from being dark, as the gridiron men are taking a keen interest in their workouts.

Plans are now being made for a preliminary battle with members of the alumni on Saturday, September 23. Judging from the appearance of many of the former students at Ashland High, a good game is assured the school eleven. In addition to the two Rogue River teams, games are wanted with Klamath Falls and Roseburg, and every energy is being bent toward including these two on the list of victims for the season.
