Disasterous Fire Season Nearly Over
Is Belief of Forestry Association

PORTLAND, Sept. 15.—After much anxiety until the end of August the backbone of one of the west's most dangerous fire seasons has finally been broken and remaining risk is confined mainly to hunters' and campers' carelessness should there be dry weather in early September, is the consensus of the monthly reports received recently by the Western Forestry and Conservation association, from public and private firefighting agencies throughout the five Pacific Coast states.

Except in a few localities the season has been one of tremendous expense and taxed all protective organizations to their utmost to prevent sweeping loss of life and property. The force of several thousand men is now being reduced, although it will be kept at working strength during September and partially employed in improving telephone lines, trails and other facilities for use in 1923.

Although light rains relieved the tension in many places early in August, there were 2000 fires during the month. The damage has not yet been accurately reported, but is comparatively small, considering the great number of fires handled, because of the prompt action and extensive forces employed by the protective agencies.

Prosecutions for carelessness and incendiarism were numerous, over 50 convictions being secured during August. Lightning was also a prolific cause of fires, while in no previous season has there been so much complaint of those caused by cigarettes. In a number of instances, moonshiners have added to the troubles of patrolmen, and lookouts who have investigated distant smokes, found them arising from concealed stills.

In Oregon the worst fires in August were in the northern Coast region and caused by careless loggers. Considerable merchantable timber was killed, in spite of heavy firefighting expense, but it will mostly be salvaged. In the interior a distinct increase of fire was noted after the game season opened and hunters entered the woods. From now on these and careless burners of slashings constitute the chief hazard. The forest service office in Portland reports having had nearly 700 men on duty during August, expending $40,000 in three weeks. Out of 307 fires extinguished, two-thirds were man-caused. This report covers national forests in Washington also.

Private and state authorities in Washington had 150 fires of consequence ascribed chiefly to berry-pickers, campers and loggers, that required much effort to control, but were not as destructive as those earlier in the season.

Montana had a fairly average month, with little damage. The same general report is received from California, although the forest service had over 500 fires and three of them in the Shasta region, two being incendiary, destroyed much scenic value.

Idaho had much fire throughout August, due to excessive lightning, but extraordinary effort by patrol associations and other agencies kept the situation in hand. It remains critical, however, unless the present weather disturbances brings rain in some amount, for the unusual dryness of the forests has not been effectively relieved.

HAS SERVED LONG

Edward Dunn entered the government service in 1897 as a mounted messenger under Secretary of War Stanton. After 25 years' service he was relieved August 20. His co-workers presented him with a purse filled with gold, which was handed to him by Secretary Weeks.

ZANE GREY TO VISIT AND FISH IN ROGUE

After a search of the entire northwest for the best steelhead stream, Zane Grey, author of many stories of the west, has decided to try the Rogue, according to the Grants Pass Courier. He will spend a week there after the big fellows and expects to get a number before he continues southward. He has just returned from the northern end of Vancouver island, where he had heard there was excellent fishing. He has never yet been able to land a steelhead, although he has made other trips here. The fishing is incidental to gathering material for a new novel which he expects to publish in the next two years.

KLAMATH SAWMILLS WILL NOT OPERATE IN WINTER

KLAMATH FALLS, Sept. 15.—Current rumors that the sawmills of this district will operate through the winter months was given little foundation in talks yesterday with H. D. Mortenson of the Pelican Bay Lumber company, and Mat Egan of the Algoma Lumber company. Mortenson said his company had no intention of operating this winter, but that the sawmill would continue to operate up to the holidays. The box factory would continue through the winter, he said. The company is about to start installation of new dry kilns at a cost of approximately $40,000.

PROBLEM OF INDUNATION LOOMS IN LEGAL SUIT

REDDING, Calif., Sept. 15.—The project of the Glenn-Colusa Irrigation district making a storage reservoir of all Fall River valley, inundating 65,000 acres of fertile and tilled land, submerging the towns of Fall River, Mills, Glenburn, Pittville and Dana, destroying all roads and bridges in the valley and obliterating farms and farm improvements, loomed big yesterday in the trial of the condemnation suit brought by the Pacific Gas and Electric against Malcolm Dennis and sisters over the riparian rights in a quarter section of land a short distance above Pittville.

“WE, THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES,—”

As decade after decade passes, we who live and prosper under the Constitution marvel more and more at the matchless wisdom, the almost prophetic vision of those early leaders of the nation who could devise a plan of government so perfect that it has endured basically unchanged for over a hundred and thirty years.

The story of the making of the Constitution and what it means to us is told in an absorbingly interesting manner in the latest of the Our Government stories now being issued by this Institution.
