FIVE ARE HURT AS RACING CAR LEAVES TRACK

SUNDAY RACES MARRED BY CASUALTIES DURING 50-MILE CLASSIC

CONDITION OF DRIVER CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Kaplin Sustains Fractured Skull and Other Injuries; Machine Quits Course and Plunges into Water Tank Holding Spectators.

Four men and one boy were seriously injured Sunday afternoon, when an Essex special driven by Kaplin, of Portland, left the Jackson county race track at the southeast turn as the result of a broken tie rod, and hit a 20-foot tower supporting a large water tank, on which three men and three boys were seated watching the races.

The injured were Kaplin, the driver of the car; D. M. Lowe, who lives at the place where the accident occurred; Roy Coffman, of near Talent; J. F. Hibbard, of Medford, and the small son of Dan Doran, of Orchard Home near Medford. It is thought that all will recover.

Kaplin suffered the most serious injury, being struck by one of the cross pieces of the water tower as the machine went underneath it, the cross-piece cutting open his forehead so that the skin hung over his eyes. It was thought at first that his sight had been destroyed, but upon examination, it was found this was not the case. However, he suffered a fractured skull, which may prove fatal, although word from the hospital today held out the hope that he would recover.

Lowe, Coffman, Hibbard, and the Doran boy with two other boys were on the platform that supported the water tank when the tie rod broke and the car started for the outside fence. Lowe, upon seeing that the car would hit the tank, threw one of the boys off the platform and jumped with another, only to be caught beneath the falling structure. Coffman and Hibbard jumped at about the same time as Lowe, but were likewise caught by the falling timbers. Lowe extricated himself, but the other two men could not get out until help arrived, and they were taken out more dead than alive, but revived after arriving at the hospital. Lowe suffered a badly hurt back where the timbers caught him, but no bones were broken, and his condition is reported as improved today.

Hibbard suffered a dislocated hip, while Coffman was bruised and cut about the face and hands. Neither are in a serious condition.

The Doran boy suffered a broken nose and a dislocated knee, besides some minor cuts and bruises.

TRIBUTE TO VETERANS OF 1812 MADE AT SALEM

SALEM, Or., Sept. 18.—Two of the three soldiers of the war of 1812, whose graves were discovered in Oregon, were buried in Salem. They are John Pollard Gaines, first territorial governor of Oregon, and Leven Nelson English.

Saturday, Mrs. J. M. Knight and a number of other Portlanders came to Salem, and placed markers on the graves of these early-day heroes. Mr. Gaines and Mr. English entered this war the same week from Kentucky, and each has daughters surviving, who are members of the Daughters of 1812.

INDIANS KILLS LARGE BEAR WITH CROWBAR

NEWPORT, Or., Sept. 18.—Joseph Yuse, an Indian fisherman, while crossing Siletz bay, encountered a large black bear swimming across the bay. Yuse was unarmed, but had a crowbar in his launch. He an alongside the bear and hit it over the head with the crowbar. The bear showed fight and tried to climb into the boat. After a 15-minute fight the bear was killed. Bears are very plentiful in the north end of the county this season, and it is a daily occurrence for one more to be brought to Newport.

MODESTY LACKING BY FRENCH GENERAL WHEN YOUNG OFFICER

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Marshal Foch became reminiscent a few evenings ago at a small dinner party. He was asked what he wanted to be when he was a boy—soldier or merchant—or what?

"I can't reply very well to that," he answered, and his eyes twinkled. "But when I was a young officer I used to build air castles. I envisioned myself attaining the rank of colonel and retiring with the honor of the cross of an officer of the Legion of Honor."

INGRESS MADE INTO ARGONAUT BY TWO MINERS

JACKSON, Calif., Sept. 18.—The Argonaut mine has been entered.

Two hardy muckers have gone through an opening made from the 3600 foot level of the Kennedy mine into the south drift of the Argonaut 4200 foot level, and are passing back muck, preparing a way for the United States bureau of mines' rescue crew of men. On them will fall the duty of exploring the depths of the burning Argonaut mine to determine whether life still exists, or whether the 47 men entombed there three weeks ago, are all dead, as is now feared.

While admittedly there is only faint hope for the 47 miners, nurses and physicians are in readiness for service on the surface or underground.

An airplane has rushed whiskey here from San Francisco to be used as a stimulant if needed. Nothing has been overlooked.

How long it will take the rescuers, and what they will encounter and where they will be able to go, are matters of conjecture only.

SHORT CHANGERS VISIT ASHLAND

Short change artists were busy in Ashland Saturday night, but they met their equal when they endeavored to work their scheme on Miss Marjorie Piffeld, clerk at the McNair Brothers drug store.

As is usually the case, a woman and a man came in, and the woman asked for a five dollar bill in exchange for five silver dollars, and after getting the bill, threw down another bill on the counter with a silver dollar, whereupon she declared that Miss Piffeld had given her a five dollar bill when she should have given her a ten. The clerk was in deep water and held onto the bill until she could get the matter cleared up. This irritated the customers, who became abusive in their talk, causing W. H. McNair, who was in the rear of the store, to come out to see what the trouble was, whereupon the man asked for some medicine in order to stop McNair from interfering with the game. The druggist got the medicine for the man and then asked what the trouble was. The woman again asked for her five dollars, but Mr. McNair decided they would check up and see how the register stood, and found that Miss Piffeld was standing on her rights.

The strangers left meekly, but were seen in various other stores during the evening. It is not known if they were successful in their operations at any other place or not.

British reinforcements are pouring into the neutral zone lying on the border of Europe and Asia Minor.

Soviet Russia supports the Turks' claims to Constantinople, and urges the withdrawal of foreign Europeans from the Turks.

Smyrna is virtually destroyed by flames.

Dead are estimated at more than 150,000.

Turkey urges the withdrawal of foreign troops in European Turkey.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The war clouds over the Near East began to brighten today, and there are indications that a conflict may be averted. Both France and Italy are opposed to war, making it necessary for England to wage the fight alone if war is declared against Turkey.

The British cabinet met, after which it was officially stated that no preparations were being made for war, and only precautionary measures are being taken.

However, British reinforcements continue to reach the neutral zone on the Turkish straits and have greeted entrenchments to prevent the Turks from crossing into European soil.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—There will be no peace conference until the Turkish nationalists give assurances that they will not make an attack on the neutral zone, the British cabinet has decided.

He was carried into the smoking room at the pavilion, where he passed away. Soon after his heart stopped beating Wolgamott's body turned black. Flask-pocket poison had done its worst.

TENDER SCENES ARE WITNESSED AT TABERNACLE

PATHETIC PROCESSION FORMED BY CHILDREN DURING HEALING SERVICE

DR. PRICE RELATES STORY OF BAPTISM

Evangelist Has Varied Career in Religious Work Before Receiving His Real Call; Meeting in Medford Well Attended.

A remarkable children's healing meeting Saturday afternoon and a wonderful healing meeting at Medford Sunday afternoon, mark the progress of the Price revival campaign. The sermons preached in the Chautauqua tabernacle Saturday and Sunday evenings and both here and at Phoenix Sunday morning were full of power and spirituality, making a profound impression on those who heard the messages.

"The dawning of a better day in Ashland," is the comment made by many church people on the movement which has begun here for a higher plane of Christian living. "We believe in everything which is being said and done at these meetings," remarked a local minister, voicing the attitude of his professional brethren, "but we haven't had the power to take hold of the promises of God as Dr. Price is doing. The church is only beginning to regain the power which was lost during the dark ages. There is no limit to the omnipotence of God, but there is a limit to the faith of some of his people."

Never have the people of Ashland witnessed a more touching scene than that which was enacted Saturday afternoon, when more than half a hundred sick and diseased children formed a pathetic procession across the Chautauqua platform, passing in turn to be appointed and prayed for by the servant of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Like the Man of Galilee, Dr. Price took the little ones in his arms and blessed them, paying with all his heart and soul that their bodies might be healed.

The effect in most cases was most miraculous.

As a result of these and many other cures, parents of the children who were healed, are giving their hearts to the Lord and consecrating their lives to Him. The altar services Saturday evening and Sunday noon were the best of the campaign, reminding those present of old-time revivals. Not only did many believers reconsecrate themselves, but a large number of unconverted confessed their sins and found pardon and salvation. The number of young people who are starting in the Christian life gives special joy to the workers.

Dr. Price's own story of how he received the second baptism made a profound impression upon the congregation Sunday morning. Following some missionary work in Alaska he gave up preaching for Chautauqua work. Then he attended a series of revival meetings conducted by Aimee Semple McPherson, where he received the second baptism. Dr. Price then returned to the church, where he had had but 16 conversions in eight years, and doubled his membership in less than two years. This year he has baptized 167 new converts.

A crowded house greeted the revival party at Medford yesterday afternoon. Thirty people were in the healing line, some remarkable cures being effected in answer to prayer. One woman was healed before she reached Dr. Price, receiving divine help direct. Ten unsatisfied souls responded to the altar call.

There will be healing meetings Tuesday and Friday evenings and Wednesday afternoon, the latter being for the special benefit of old people who are unable to attend the evening meetings. A large congregation is expected this evening to hear Dr. Price's discourse on "The Second Coming of Christ."
