The Appeal of the North—

Towering mountains of snow, frozen trails, sweeping gales and leaden skies form a striking frame for the surging drama of "My Dad," which is being shown at the Vining theatre today and Saturday. As the heroic boy who fights his way through the bitter cold of frozen trails to remove the stigma of guilt from his aged father, Johnnie Walker, of "Over the Hill" fame, gives one of the most brilliant performances of his career.

Big Steelhead Caught—

Fishermen who have spent many hours in the cold waters of the Rogue river in an effort to persuade the "biggest" steelhead to accept the bait, now have a mark set in the way of the big 'uns, says the Grants Pass Courier. Those who have their eyes on the cup offered for the largest one caught during the 1922 season will have to land one larger than 15 pounds and 4 ounces, and 36 inches in length, for that was what the one entered by Mr. Van Leuvan, of Portland, weighed. The big fish was caught on a fly near Galice. The next largest steelhead entered in the contest weighed a little less than 12 pounds.

COWBOY'S WEAPON THE RIFLE

Never Had the Popularity of the "Gun," Which Was Name Universally Given the Pistol.

In describing the weapons of the cowboy of the Western range, Philip Ashton Rollins in his book says: The rifle, when carried, was conveyed, not by the cowboy himself, but by his horse, which bore it in a quiver-shaped, open-mouthed scabbard, into which the rifle went up to its stock. This scabbard sometimes hung from the saddle horn, but more commonly was slung butt forward, in an approximately horizontal position along the near side of the animal, and passed between the two leaves of the stirrup-leather. The rifle was thus eschewed, because, being heavy, it interfered with ready saddling and unsaddling; and, being bulky, it materially detracted from the rider's comfort.

After the early '70s the rifle, regardless of its make, was usually called a "Winchester," though this particular term, because of its similarity to the name of a well-known condiment, was occasionally paraphrased into "Worcestershire." Fading these titles, the weapon was styled merely "rifle." It, except in the case of the rifle specially designed for bison shooting and called "buffalo guns," never was termed "gun," that word, save for the single exception noted, being consecrated to the pistol.

"Scatter-guns," otherwise shotguns, were occasionally produced by tinkerers; but they, unless with "sawed-off" barrels, loaded with nails or buckshot, and in the hands of express messengers, served for the westerner only as objects of derision.

OLD IDEA IN UNIVERSITIES

Student Bodies, Fraternally Linked, Had Their Beginnings in the Fifteenth Century.

University life today embodies many ancient practices in slightly modified form. College fraternities really date back to the fifteenth century, when universities were few in number and students were attracted to them from many lands. The student body naturally gathered into groups according to nationalities, and these groups were known as "nations." Later came the organization of the student corps in German universities. In some American universities today there are nation societies, as the Philippine, Chinese, Japanese and Cuban, representing the nations, and the Southerners, Southwesterners, Pacific coast and others representing sections and states of the Union.

Poor students of the fifteenth century drifted from one university to another, supporting themselves by singing, begging, stealing and, occasionally, working.

The freshmen had a rather sorry time. In the German universities they were termed "Schutzen," and were compelled to perform all sorts of menial offices for the upper class men, who were termed "Baccchanten," and were often worthy of that title. From this practice developed the system of "fagging" in the English grammar schools. That practice traces back even to the academic schools of Athens. The freshmen, on admission to a university, were put through an initiation ordeal which was the origin of the present-day hazing.

Hard Elder Homilies. Different people have different ways of giving us pain; our friends leave us—and our relatives fall to.

Eternity is almost beyond human comprehension; imagine, if you can, a period so long that it would allow a man to save enough cigar coupons to get a plane or a motorcycle.

Propinquity may account for many marriages, but it is responsible for even more divorces.

It has taken Satan thousands of years to reach his present technique; yet the latest arrivals from the earth can always show him a thing or two.

People seldom turn maxims over and look at them from the back. It is easy to believe that great oaks from little acorns grow, but it is quite as easy to believe that little acorns from great oaks grow.—Edwin H. Blanchard, in the New York Sun.

Mr. Jones. Consider the case of Mr. Jones. He bought a watch for 50 bones. Does Mr. Jones rant, curse and swear, does Mr. Jones his toupee tear; whenever in the day or night he finds that watch not running right? No, Mr. Jones, a thoughtful man, knows watch never will or can, so long as heat and cold prevail, hit time exactly on the nail. Now this identical Mr. Jones will buy—well, not for 50 bones, but for the price of a cheap cigar—the right to ride on a trolley; car, a car that has to run its race within no sealed and dustproof case but on a crowded city street where all the tides of traffic meet, and yet Mr. Jones starts a hot debate when e'er that car's a minute late.—From Electric Traction.

Length of Birds' Life. The chief of the biological bureau in the United States is able to give the ages to which some birds have lived. Bobbed Hair Only A Fad?

It Was Popular in 28 A. D., And Still Is

Is bobbed hair to go the way of bobbed skirts? Is it merely a modern whim, destined to be discarded as soon as the vanguard of novelty has worn through?

The picture above is Nazimova's answer to such a query. The photograph shows the great Russian star wearing what history establishes as the coiffure of Salome, the dancing headliner of antiquity. She wore bobbed hair, even in her moments of vamping—which means nearly always. That was in the spring of 28 A. D. A complicated bit of subtraction reveals that this was 1894 years ago.

"If a style has prevailed 1894 years," said Nazimova, "it can hardly be called ephemeral. I think bobbed hair is here to stay. It's sensible, and for the woman of small stature, becoming."

Nazimova is soon to be seen in a motion picture version of "Salome." It is based upon Oscar Wilde's poetic drama; and the art settings, by Natacha Rambova, follow the drawings of Aubrey Beardsley. Charles Bryant directed the piece.

INDIAN PLEADS GUILTY; IS FREED BY JUDGE

THE DALLES, Or., Oct. 6.—All precedent in the history of Wasco county circuit court was broken when Judge Wilson freed Columbia Dick, an Indian, the confessed slayer of a fellow tribesman, Jim Starr. Altogether three Indians were involved in the killing, according to the testimony of witnesses at a preliminary hearing. George Billie and William George were tried on a charge of manslaughter and acquitted by Wasco county juries. Columbia Jack pleaded guilty to the charge, and was to have been sentenced upon the completion of the trials of his associates.

"It would be a travesty on justice for me to send this man to the penitentiary, with others at large who are more responsible than he for the crime that was committed," Judge Wilson declared.

"While he may have been at the scene of the murder and may have had something to do with it, I would never feel at ease if I sent this man to prison. While I recognize that this man has entered a plea of guilty," the judge continued, "it has been very evident to the court that there was pressure behind the plea."
