CHINESE WOMEN WORKERS WALK OUT ON STRIKE

SHANGHAI, Oct. 10.—Ten thousand Chinese women employed in various silk filatures in Shanghai, are striking for better pay and shorter hours of work.

The workers, who at present work 12 hours at a wage of 38 cents a day, are demanding a ten hour day, and an increase of five cents per day in their pay.

Early this morning more than one thousand workers, including young girls and old women, attempted to enter a number of filatures to enlist the sympathy of the workers, but a hurry call from the employers brought a detail of police, and the women were frightened away.

TRADE THE "KIDS"

How New Yorker Would Eradicate Sin From Youngsters.

Brilliant Idea Came to Him as Result of Interview With Mothers of Future Citizens.

The New York apartment house is an excellent laboratory in which to study life and evolve profound theories, observes a New York Sun writer. For instance, there was the resident who came down to his office one day last week and announced he had discovered a sure and simple scheme for extracting sinfulness from young children.

Five out of seven families in his apartment contain children. It was eight o'clock as he made his round, that time of the day when mothers, their morale weakening, contemplate the bedlamite carrying on of their young ones and allow their minds to dwell morbidly on such subjects as hysteria, aberration and fever of the brain.

Mrs. Jones came to the door in the first-floor apartment and signed the petition; but it was probable she did not know what she was signing, for three small boys were playing steam calliope in the hall behind her and conversation was virtually impossible.

After staggering through a line or two she gave up, putting her hand to her brain and crying, "Don't blame this hullabaloo on my children! Blame it on that awful Smith boy!—the red-headed one!—he always puts 'em up to something like this. If he was mine I'd educate him with a bed slat."

The man went up a floor. Mrs. Smith signed his paper, too. But she had a hard time doing it, because two little girls in the room were yanking each other's hair out and she was trying to call an armistice with her left hand while she wrote with her right. Done writing, she turned and pried the two enemies apart, took one of them to the elevator, rang the bell and told her to go right home and stay home.

"That little Jones girl," she orated, coming back, "is going to grow up a female anarchist and get deported to Russia. If she was my child I'd get a barrel stave and—and try to stave it out."

On the third floor Mrs. Ferguson said: "Of course, I'll sign it. Have you?" Then a riot burst out behind her. She whirled around. Three young ladies were playing dolls. But they were not using dolls, they were using a cat! And the cat had got to the end of her rope. She had endured having a sunbonnet on her head and shoes laced on her feet and a corset bound round her abdomen, but when her three parents had decided that she was sick and put her to bed and begun to pour castor oil through a funnel into her throat she had quit; she had risen up and used her claws and teeth in self-defense.

Mrs. Ferguson shouted dramatically at one of these young ladies, "Jasmine Foster, if I were your mother, I'd—I'd—leave this apartment before I lose control of myself!"

The man went up one more floor and came to the Foster place. But before he could ring the bell, the door burst open and a little boy catapulted out into the hall as if he had been shot out with a cannon.

"Do you know what that—that Ferguson demon was doing?" raved Mrs. Foster, with her first words. "He was playing shoot the chutes down the lid of my grand piano!"

Then the agonized woman wailed, "Oh, if I could only get the chance to mother that—that blackguard for just one day!—just one solitary, little, twenty-four-hour day!"

And then the man went downstairs, evolving his great idea—congress should pass a law compelling every mother to trade children with another mother one day in every week.

New Marriage Service.

The woman minister of the Greville Place church, in London, Rev. Constance Mary Colman, M. A., B. D., has composed a new marriage service which she reads at all weddings at which she officiates.

The most interesting feature of it is that both bride and bridegroom plight their troth with a ring, each placing a ring on the other's finger. The word "obey" does not occur in the service, and the man and woman make exactly the same vows. Mrs. Colman has also written a new christening service.—London Tit-Bits.

The Helping Hand.

I had gone to the golf links to meet and accompany my husband home after his game.

Seeing a player coming toward me from a distance following up his ball, I thought I would assist him and so I picked the ball up off the green and threw it back to him. Then as he and his comrades neared the green an argument ensued as to where the ball had been.

I am now afraid to visit the links for fear of meeting the recipient of my kindness.—Chicago Tribune.

Absolutely Last.

Her Little Husband—Striking a woman is the last thing I'd ever do. Mrs. Heavysides—It sure would be if I was the woman. You wouldn't survive long enough for an encore.
